Nativity Story by Luke, Best Known

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International
His name was Luke, and he was a physician by trade. But history knows him best as an author.

He wrote the most beloved story in all literature. It is called the Nativity story, and it is found in the first 20 verses of the second chapter of the Gospel according to St. Luke.

It is only 416 words from the beginning to end. But it has had a greater impact on the minds and hearts of men than any long novel, play or poem you can name.

From it have come enough great masterpieces of art to fill a hundred galleries.

It has inspired a whole library of music, ranging from familiar carols like "Silent Night" to majestic oratorios like Handel's "Messiah."

For more than 1,900 years it has been read, and cherished, by all sorts and conditions of men. It has moved Medieval monks—and atomic scientists; Roman charioteers and New York taxi-drivers; Oxford dons—and African bushmen.

Many Translations

It has been translated into more than 1,300 languages and dialects, and its poetic beauty always seems to come through.

This week, as always at Christmas time, it will be read aloud in millions of churches and homes.

"And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed..."

Luke goes on to tell how Joseph and Mary left their home at Nazareth and went up to Bethlehem, the home of their ancestors, to be enrolled for the Roman census. It must have been a hard journey for Mary, since, the physician notes, she was "great with child."

"And so it was that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered."

"And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn."

Christmas In Autumn
How many millions of sermons have been preached on that one text?

The first Christmas did not fall on Dec. 25. That date was picked arbitrarily many centuries later. It must have been some time in the autumn, when the weather was still mild in Palestine, for Luke records that "there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night."

"And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid."

"And the angel said unto them, fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a savior, which is Christ the Lord."

"And this shall be a sign unto you: ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Whether Luke meant his story to be read as literal history, or dramatic poetry, is a question for Biblical scholars to debate.

Some modern scholars, having never heard a choir of angels, assume that no one else has either.

Others point out that critical studies have established Luke as a reliable reporter, who carefully researched his facts.

Perhaps if Luke could join in the debate, he would say that the herald angels' song was audible, then as now, only to those willing to hear it.
