

Small Worlds Around Us

By Lynn M. Watkins

You Have a Jungle Right in Your Own Yard

You have a jungle in your own yard. It is peopled with beings as strange and just as interesting as the inhabitants of any tropical jungle anywhere in the world. The animals are not as big, and not as dangerous as they are at all there, just waiting for you to discover them.

You need no equipment, unless it be a reading glass, no money and very little time. Your exploration can be taken in five minute trips, if you prefer.

There are many kinds of jungles, depending of course on where we have been, what we have read or what we want to believe. Ordinarily a jungle is a hot, steamy place where the humid air brings trees and plants to an exaggerated size, held together with vines that crawl snake-like over everything and hold it all together. These jungles are the pictured spots where Tarzan of the Apes swung from tree to tree and wild beasts prowled unmolessted.

We read of the rain jungles of equatorial Africa and Central South America. Jungles which are brought about because of prodigious rainfall together with a hot sun.

Woodpatch Jungle

To the small child the woodpatch in the vacant lot next door is a jungle. It is a place of mystery where strange creatures hide and where danger lurks.

Descending down the scale we find another jungle at our feet. This is the tangled mass of grass-roots that carpet our lawn, or a vacant field. This is a true jungle to the little things that have their home there.

Insects of many thousands of kinds clamber and wriggle through the labyrinth of grass-roots, living their interesting and mysterious lives at our very feet.

Some time, when you are fed up with the routine tasks that constitute your daily lives, stop for a few minutes and go out into your own yard. Get down on your hands and knees and look at the grass-roots of your lawn. As your eyes become focused you will see a new world moving before you; a hurrying, hungry world of insects scampering, climbing and scurrying on their journeys toward an unknown destination.

A Busy World

This world is as busy as any modern city street. Instead of motor cars, buses and people, here are creatures with strange shapes. Some are grotesque, some are actually hideous. Few of them will hurt you. They are too busy with their own affairs even to notice your presence.

Even if you cannot identify a hundredth of them, don't become discouraged. You are only seeking amusement anyway. Watch where they are going and what they are doing. If you are a close observer you will find crime here too. There are many killers in this little world. To survive they prey on everything they meet.

Others will be gathering bits of food and carrying it away to a storage bin. Some will be making love, some will be robbing their neighbors and some will be hiding behind a grass blade or a kernel of sand, to ambush a passerby.

Here is a jungle which you can explore safely at your leisure. Maybe you can find here that thing for which every one seeks today in this troubled world - temporary escape from that jungle called civilization.

Two Adult Classes Set at Crater High

Central Point - The Crater High school agriculture department will start two adult courses, "Crop and Soil Science," beginning Jan. 18, and "Farm Electricity," beginning Jan. 20, according to Ed Griggs, agriculture instructor.

Selection of the two courses was made Wednesday at a meeting of the agriculture department's adult advisory council.

The fee for the former course is $5 and that for the latter is $10. Each class will meet weekly for 10 weeks.

Anyone interested in attending, Griggs said, should contact the Crater High school vocational agriculture department by mail or call Normandy 4-1103.
