

$300,000 in Ransom Money Never Found After Greenlease Kidnaping

St. Louis, Mo. —(UPI)—Some time, somehow, someplace, $300,000 disappeared six years ago.

The money, all in $10 and $20 bills, was half the $600,000 ransom paid in vain by Robert Cosgrove Greenlease, Kansas City millionaire, to the kidnapers of his 6-year-old son, Bobby.

Half the money was recovered with the capture of the kidnap-murderers. What happened to most of the other half has become one of the nation's most intriguing mysteries.

Three key theories dominate the case:

—The money was "purchased" at discount rates, similar to those used in counterfeiting operations, by a major crime syndicate, which, perhaps from a foreign base, is awaiting an opportunity to return the fortune to circulation.

—It was hidden or buried by one or several individuals who are awaiting a chance either to use it or sell it.

—It already has been returned to circulation and, badly worn, has unknowingly been burned or replaced by treasury officials.

"I couldn't even guess where that money is now," St. Louis Chief of Detectives James Chapman says.

"Absolutely anything could have happened to it," according to Kansas City police official Jack Halvey.

FBI officials in St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago said they were "watching—and waiting."

For nine days in the autumn of 1953, Greenlease, 71, waited for word of his only son, taken by a ruse from a second grade class at an exclusive parochial school.

For all nine days, it was learned later, Bobby had been dead, buried in a shallow grave beneath fall-blooming chrysanthemums behind the St. Joseph, Mo., home of Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady.

Convicted and executed for the kidnap-killing were Carl Austin Hall, a paroled drug addict, and Mrs. Heady, Hall's alcoholic mistress.

It was Mrs. Heady who posed as Bobby's aunt and took him from the school on the pretext that Mrs. Greenlease had just suffered a heart attack. Once outside, Mrs. Heady and Bobby took a waiting cab to a nearby parking lot where they met Hall.

Hall confessed that the three drove in a station wagon to the country and, within the hour, he tried to strangle Bobby with a 12-inch rope. The rope was not long enough and Bobby kept struggling, Hall said, so he shot the boy twice.

Five days later, in reply to a ransom note, two of Greenlease's business partners left three cheap metal suitcases on a bridge on an isolated country road. Inside was $600,000. Police followed 'tip'.

Two days passed. Then, following what they later said was "a tip," St. Louis Police Lt. Louis Shoulters and Patrolman Elmer Dolan walked into a well-decorated motel apartment. There they found Hall and, in a closet, the two still closed metal suitcases.

Hall said all the money was there. He said he had just counted it.

Across town, other officials walked into a cheap hotel room and found Bonnie Heady. She was drunk and had been beaten. She said Hall had hit her.

Hall and Mrs. Heady were then taken to police headquarters. So were the two suitcases.

There FBI agents opened the suitcases. They contained only $300,000.

To their deaths, Hall and Mrs. Heady swore they had no idea what happened to the missing $300,000. Cop Quits Force

Shoulders, a 27-year-old police veteran, quit the force during the investigation that followed. Later he and Dolan were convicted of perjury and sentenced to a federal penitentiary. Both have been released.

Greenlease never entered the case or talked of the matter again after Bobby's body was found.

Shoulders had contended St. Louis gangsters stole the money from Hall during a free-spending party Hall gave in his motel room the day before his arrest.

Shoulders said he learned of Hall through two informants who told of a stranger in town spending money like water. Shoulders identified one of the informants as a cab driver, John Hager. Through-out, Shoulders never would tell who the other informant was.

Since then, several of St.

Louis' cab drivers have been numbers of the missing bills killed under mysterious cir-cumstances. Two years after the kidnaping, the first missing ransom cab driver killings have noth-bill turned up in St. Louis. It going to do with the missing was a $20 bill. Occasionally, Greenlease money," Chapman here and there, a few others were found. Then the ransom was found. The ransom money was found. The ransom money was found.
