Firm's Pen-Tester Wall Street Always Writing Chatter

Fort Madison, Ia. — They call Miss Irene Williams the "penpal penwoman." Every working day for the past eight years she's put 7,000 words and figures down on paper. In her job of testing Shaeffer Pen company's fountain pencils, ballpoints and mechanical pencils the marathon writer pours the words onto paper, then reports on the effects of her testing. "Although the firm has banks of writing machines that turn out millions of slants and ovals monthly," she explained, "only human handwriting can provide full information. I look for the effects of hand temperature changes, sudden reversals, different hand pressures and inconsistent motion that pencils and pens meet in consumer use." Though she's penned enough words to make more than 30 copies of "Gone With the Wind," Miss Williams has no inclination to become an author. Her hobby? Letter-writing to friends and relatives.

Church Gets Present From Mystery Donor

Chula Vista, Calif. — The pastor of the First Congregational church received a pleasant surprise from a $900 contribution in the Sunday collection plate. Nine $100 bills were in an envelope marked "for the building fund." There was no clue to the donor.
