Wall Street Chatter

New York (AP)—We are witnessing the start of a new price trend of great importance in the stock market—the introduction of a new set of market leaders, says Trendex.

In an intermediate-term forecast two to five months, the investment advisory firm believes the new leaders will be the laggards of 1959.

"Groups such as oils, machinery, aircraft and non-ferrous metals offer good gain potential at relatively low risk," Trendex points out. "On the other hand, there is still large gain potential in the groups that have been leaders since September, but in the case of those the risk factor is higher."

The recent strength in the railroad group has enabled New York Central to move into an area of heavy resistance which lies between 30 1/2 and 32 1/2, according to Bache & Co. "Once the stock has passed through this zone we would look for a more dynamic performance."

Purcell & Co. notes that Briggs & Stratton operates in one of the fastest growing industries in the U.S., light machinery and metal products and has enjoyed rapid increases in both sales and earnings. It represents excellent purchase for income and growth, the firm believes.
