Values Compared
Harrisburg—Pennsylvania's oil wells produce more revenues than the value of all the grain crops harvested in the state.

Celery Seized Because Of Too Much Pesticide

Washington—UPI—The head of the food and drug administration said his agency has recently seized "a number of shipments" of celery produced by a grower who used too much pesticide on his crop.

Commissioner George P. Larrick did not identify the grower except to say that "he has some large plots of celery now inside the state of Florida." He said the grower "will not dare" ship them unless "he removes this material that it not supposed to be there."

Larrick said his agency had another case in which a lettuce grower left too much pesticide on his crops "and we're seizing them through the federal courts."

Cases Cited
The commissioner cited the cases in an effort to show that some producers refuse, or fail, to follow directions given by manufacturers or the government for use of pesticides, some of which have caused cancer in animals.

He said on a radio program (Radio News Conference—NES Associates, Inc.) that the government normally tries to cope with such problems through educational programs "by letting people know what's expected of them."

But he said if that doesn't work, it can institute seizure or bring criminal prosecutions and "we expect to use all of those."

Program Not Enough
Larrick refused to say that the educational approach had been a failure. But he said it will not solve the problem by itself. As in the case of penicillin in milk, he said "we have issued instructions to our field force" to test routine samples.

Larrick quickly added that

40-Acre Farm With Cabin Cheap in 1837
New Hope, Pa. — Back in 1837 you could locate on a 40-acre farm and build a cabin and rail fence for a total outlay of $250 in the now-booming Bucks county. It was right there in print in an old newspaper, William Budlig dug out of his grandfather's attic.
