Hints to Keep Flowers Fresh

Doylestown, Pa. - (UPI) - Cut flowers purchased during the winter can be kept fresh-looking for a longer time with proper care, says Abraham Rellis, floriculture instructor at the National Agricultural college.

Rellis suggested the following care: Change the water and remove about one-quarter inch from the bottom of each stem daily. The cut should be made on the slant rather than straight across.

Remove any leaves that may dip into the water in the container. Keep cut flowers away from direct heat, preferably in a cooler area of the room. Apply one of several products sold in florist-supplies stores to keep cut flowers fresh.

HAND CROCHETED full-length coats are the latest boutique item from Italy to gladden the hearts of women who appreciate fine craftsmanship. The one shown above (imported by New York's Tailored Woman) features a shell pattern with a contrasting band of plain crocheting forming the softly draped collar, cuffs, front edging and hem. Crocheted in two layers, it doesn't sag and has extra warmth. This coat comes in beige, white, and an assortment of colors. Other imports include sweater coats of plain or textured designs in crocheting or hand knit styles. The hat shown above is an olive green soft felt by Canessa, a design inspired by the headgear of a Padre of old Peru. It can be worn with or without a close-fitting snood of jersey.

PLEASURE CENTER

Ann Arbor, Mich. - (UPI) - Research at the University of Michigan shows that tranquilizers powerfully affect the "pleasure centers" of the brain.

During the experiments, rats were conditioned to press a lever to receive an electrical stimulus producing satisfaction. But after receiving a tranquilizer, the rats no longer cared to press the lever giving the pleasurable stimulus.

room mothers, Mrs. J. E. Fisher, Mrs. Rolan Rosecrans, Mrs. Charles Rosecrans and Mrs. Clyde Kell will be in charge of refreshments which will be served in the school's cafeteria after the meeting and program.

Queen Buys Few Maternity Clothes; Favorites Suitable

By MARGARET SAVILLE
London (UPI) - Queen Elizabeth is no different than most expectant mothers in wanting to look nice in maternity clothes.

The Queen, who likes pretty clothes, has added very little to her wardrobe during the months she has been expecting her third child. She has found that many of her simple stay-at-home clothes are completely suitable.

Because the Queen always is under public scrutiny, she must look her best.

No new maternity clothes have been designed for this royal "lady in waiting." She already had several loosely-cut coats and dresses which she finds suitable.

She even has discovered that her favorite full-skirted short dinner dresses can be worn.

But wide-skirted evening gowns with exquisite embroidery and jeweled trimming have been stored away for the time being.

One new casual suit of gray tweed with a pleated skirt and square fox jacket was added to the Queen's wardrobe. This was ordered from the Eastbourne tailor whom she patronizes for casual wear.

Plenty of fresh air and exercise are doctor's orders for the Queen, who is constantly out of doors in spite of chilly, grey wintery weather. She spends as much time as possible at Windsor Castle, always her favorite home, driving back to London only when state or official duties demand her presence.

To ward off the chill winds during her outdoor walks, she pulls on a heavy blue tweed coat, thick flat heeled shoes, discards more formal hats and ties a colorful scarf over her head.

Reluctantly the Queen gave up riding and contents herself with keeping a maternal eye on Princess Anne as she has her morning gallop and practices jumping in Windsor Great Park.

During her walks, the Queen takes her corgi terriers, Susan and Sugar, and amuses them by throwing a rubber ball for them to retrieve.

Her estates, as well as the people on them, are of great interest to her. She sometimes drives herself about the grounds in a small family car. She likes to visit the dairy farms and the forestry workshop at the large market-garden which provides flowers, fruits and vegetables for the royal household.

Decorate Sweater

A little decorating ingenuity can give your favorite wool sweater a whole new costume lease on life. Trim it with the same fabric as a skirt or dress for that expensive custom-matched look. Trimmings of pearl, beading, colorful embroidery, or dainty clips will give a new dressed-up air to a knitted wool pullover or cardigan. Before discarding that fur coat that bares too many areas, cut and line a shawl collar of fur, and add it to the neckline of a sweater for a real luxury gift to yourself.

Ceremony Slated For Bethel 14; Rehearsal Today

Bethel 14, International Order of Job's Daughters, has scheduled a practice session for Sunday, January 10, at 2 p.m., in preparation for installation services set for Saturday, January 16. Officers and choir members are to meet at the Masonic temple promptly for the practice, it is announced.

Mrs. Earl Yoakley, guardian of paraphernalia, will distribute robes to all girls eligible for them following the Sunday session.

Since the regular session set for January 6 was cancelled, members of Bethel 14 are reminded that the formal public installation scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Saturday, January 16, will replace the January 6 meeting in counting toward perfect attendance.

The guardian council for the Bethel met January 6 in the Masonic temple for a get-acquainted potluck dinner, followed by a business session. Husbands and wives of coun-cell members were guests for MAIL TRIBUNE, Medford, Or., Sunday, Jan. 10, 1960. A 7
