

Morse and Hatfield in Same Boat Regarding Dunes Seashore Proposal is a factor for its sponsors to reckon with.

Washington - Sen. Wayne Morse and Gov. Mark Hatfield are in pretty much the same boat, as of now, with respect to the proposed Oregon Dunes National Seashore.

They aren't all-out against it. But their lack of all-out support is a factor for its sponsors to reckon with.

Sen. Richard L. Neuberger and Rep. Charles O. Porter expect to introduce newly drafted legislation this year, carrying provisions they hope will be more acceptable to local residents of the Oregon coast.

But they are awaiting the report of Gov. Hatfield, which is expected this week. This report is expected to give the governor's precise views on the proposal.

Morse Lukewarm
 Morse is lukewarm at the most in his feeling for the idea of a national seashore on the Oregon coast.

"I doubt if the bill could be put into a form that I would approve," said the senator.

By that he meant he saw little chance that the new legislation which Neuberger and Porter are drafting could meet with his approval, based on their advance indications of what it will contain.

Morse questions the need for it to be as large as has been suggested, and he goes further to question "whether or not there is any need for it at all." He suggests there is a greater need to preserve other areas of the country than the Oregon coast because everyone now has public use of the state's beaches.

Porter at Work
 Congressman Porter, meanwhile, is drafting a questionnaire which he plans to send to over 300 property owners in the dunes area. Porter said he will ask them whether they are opposed to the bill under any or all conditions, or what conditions they regard as essential should the seashore park be created.

The questionnaire will then list the numerous points which Porter mentioned in a letter to Gov. Hatfield last Oct. 16, when the congressman sought out Hatfield's precise views. These points cover boundaries, residency rights, payments in lieu of taxes, allocation of highway costs, fees for use of campsites, hunting and fishing regulations in the park, industrial reservations, local residents acting as guides for tourists, and sand dune stabilization.

The views of local property owners will then be taken into account by the 4th district representatives in drafting his new bill.

Outlook Dim
 Whatever the views of local residents, if Morse and Hatfield don't support the proposal in its modified form, the outlook for its enactment into law will grow dim. Congress is usually reluctant to authorize any public improvements that cost money, if the governor of the state opposes the idea. And the Senate is even more hesitant to do this when one senator from the state involved is opposed to it—unless, like the Hells Canyon dam bill, it has become a significant party issue.

The result, if Morse persists in his present attitude, may be that any specific bill for the Oregon Dunes will be doomed.

The Oregon National Seashore might still be accomplished however, for another bill endorsed by the Eisenhower administration could become the vehicle for several new seashore parks. Neuberger has introduced this bill, giving the interior secretary authority to create three seashores where he sees fit. Morse strongly opposes this grant of broad authority.

But if the Republican administration puts on some pressure for action on this bill, a combination of willing

Man Injured When Struck by Truck

A pickup truck struck and injured a pedestrian on North Pacific highway between Hazel and Lynn sts. about 8:05 p.m. Monday, according to city police.

Police said the pedestrian, Colonel Edward DeLong, 53, of 2390 North Pacific highway, suffered a broken right leg and abrasions of the face and body.

The driver of the pickup, Gordon Wayne McDowell, 22, Tacoma, Wash., told police he was headed south in the right lane when DeLong stepped in front of his vehicle from the roadside and he had no chance to avoid striking him.

Police did not hold McDowell and allowed him to proceed to his destination, Sacramento, Calif.

McDowell estimated the speed of his vehicle at the time of the accident to be 35 to 40 miles per hour. The speed limit is 40.

When police arrived at the scene of the accident they found the area already marked off with flares and several persons were directing traffic around the accident.

DeLong was accompanied by Theodore Roosevelt Wheat, 25, of the same address, at the time of the accident but Wheat could offer police no additional information.

Medford Ambulance Service took DeLong to the Sacred Heart hospital.
