

Gem Club Conducts Ceremony

Officers for 1960 were installed at a recent meeting of Roxy Ann Gem and Mineral club.

These included Frank Otis, president; Edgar Shoupe, vice-president; Delmar Smith, secretary; and Peter Able, treasurer.

Mr. Otis appointed committees for the coming year. They are membership, Mrs. Edwin Dusenbury, director, and Mrs. Edgar Shoupe; field trips, Edgar Shoupe, director; Peter Able and J. A. Harrison; program and publicity, Elmer Binker, director; Delmar Smith, and Frank Otis; refreshments, Mrs. Frank Otis, director, and Mrs. J. A. Harrison; ways and means, Leland Mentzer, director, and Trevelle Turpin; auditing, John Bowdish, director, and Edwin Dusenbury; displays, John Dodge, director, and Walter Emerson.

Mrs. John Dodge will continue in charge of special displays.

The more than 50 members and guests present heard Delmar Smith, owner of the Crater Rock museum, tell how to use small pieces of gem material, including nodules and limb casts, in lapidary work. The technique of casting them in plaster and slapping the resulting block, as well as the use of a tumbler for sanding and polishing was explained.

Mr. Smith illustrated his talk with examples of material in various stages of completion.

In addition he showed a series of colored slides picturing gem and mineral localities in the Pacific Northwest, telling as he did how to reach these areas as well as what could be found.

Mrs. Dodge announced that the display of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Turner, Trail, in the U.S. National bank had been replaced by one from the collection of Leroy Tompkins, Talent. This new exhibit features agatized coral from Florida and cabochons of various gem materials.

Honorary life memberships were awarded to Bruce Manley, local attorney, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Davenport, for their services to the club. Interested persons may obtain information concerning this club and its activities by calling the president, Frank Otis, SPing 2-5644, or the secretary, Delmar Smith, NOrmandy 4-1355.

The surplus wheat purchased by the government as part of the farm price-support program would fill a railroad train 5,335 miles long.

For some reason or the other, reports of the first performance of "Elijah" record that the musicians all wore full evening dress. Why this should have been considered unusual, we do not know. The first performance was given in Birmingham, England, August 26, 1846. The composer, Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy, conducted the program and we further learn that he wore white gloves. When the oratorio is performed in this country in the evening, the evening dress custom prevails. However, it seems that the conductors are not given to wearing white gloves.

Richard D. Werner, who will conduct today's performance of "Elijah" at the Medford High school auditorium, usually dignifies his programs by wearing formal clothing, a custom which this reporter enjoys. Furthermore, we enjoy watching and hearing an orchestra or chorus, with the musicians "dressed up." When the Portland Symphony orchestra played in Medford recently, the women of the orchestra wore black and white costumes with long skirts and white vests which presented a neat and effective appearance on stage.

The children of the royal house of England were in the news in recent days. The press in London recorded that Prince Charles, 11, held his first cocktail party and that his sister, Princess Anne, 9, was bridesmaid at a wedding.

Reporting from London, UPI quoted the Empire News as to details on the cocktail party. The story said the party was for adults, and that Charles, with the queen's consent, ordered the drinks from the collar and supervised the preparation of the food. The menu included "beer and sprits" the story said, but added that the young prince drank only a glass of orange juice.

The news which Princess Anne made will cause fewer lifted eyebrows. From the village of Romsey the UPI dispatch said that for the wedding the princess wore the unlikely combination of "dainty white organdy lined with rugged flannel." The lining was thoughtfully put in because the wedding, that of Lady Pamela Mountbatten to David Hicks, London interior decorator, took place in an 800-year-old "drafty abbey."

News released about the wedding said that for once the bride wasn't the center of attention. She had to share attention with Princess Anne, the queen mother, the Duke of Edinburgh, Princess Margaret, Prince Charles and dozens of lesser royalty. Queen Elizabeth could not attend since she has cancelled all engagements in anticipation of the birth of her third child.

The bride's gown was described as "softly glowing satin trimmed with white mink." Turning poet, the UPI writer concluded his story with this paragraph: "Gently falling snow had trimmed the little village in white, making it look like the top of an elaborate wedding cake."

Here's a story which came all the way from Madrid to the New York Times. A banker, asked by his teen-aged son to define "inflation" and "stabilization" pondered a moment and then said: "When you think of inflation, my son, you think of champagne, caviar, beautiful girls. When you think of stabilization, on the other hand, you must think of beer, cold cuts and your mother."—O.S.

Meetings Slated For Two Units

Two home extension units have scheduled meetings this week. Project lesson will be the making of different types of salads.

Each officer was given a white, unlighted candle by Mr. Reynolds and, in turn, lighted it from a large, burning, white candle beside an open Bible on the communion table. The officers then formed a semi-circle. A short verse of scripture pertaining to their office was read by each officer. Mr. Reynolds called upon the new officers to give of their "abilities, talents and gifts to the position of service and responsibility" they had been elected to hold. The program for the meeting was a verbal profile sketch of six women of the Bible given by Mrs. Boynton, Mrs. S. C. Watkins, Mrs. Ronald Cordon, Mrs. Milne, Mrs. William B. Johnston and Mrs. J. V. McGoodwin. They suggested that the various circles of the church be named for
