Nurse-Turned-Actress Cast as Nurse

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI

Hollywood - (UPI) - Maggie Pierce is a trained nurse. Maggie Pierce is an actress. Maggie Pierce is going to play a nurse in a new television series.

Who is Maggie Pierce? She is an extraordinarily beautiful girl—even as nurses and actresses go—who came to movietown about two years ago to become a star. She signed a long-term contract with MGM, but until now she has played only minor roles in movies with a few TV shows sprinkled in.

Now, however, the hazel-eyed brunette thinks she is off and winging as co-star of "Dr. Kildare," the studio's old movie series which is being dusted off for television.

Her co-star will be Lew Ayres, who played the title role in the Kildare flickers of the late 1930s and '40s. Love Being Nurse

"But instead of playing the young intern, he will play the role of Dr. Gillespie—the part Lionel Barrymore once had," Maggie explained happily. "Of course, he will be much younger than Mr. Barrymore was."

"Now they're looking for a young man, not too much older than I am, to portray the intern. He's the one who will be my romantic interest, and Mr. Ayres will be sort of fatherly."

Maggie perched on the corner of a studio office desk, swinging her shapely legs disconcertingly.

"I spent three years in New York's Bellevue Hospital," she said. "I loved being a nurse, but some of the doctors there advised me to give it up. They thought I couldn't dissociate myself from the patients."

Patients Get Worse

"They were right. Whenever one of my patients took a turn for the worse it would shake me up terribly. I just couldn't become calloused enough to harden myself to the suffering of other people."

"So I quit to become a model. And the first modeling job I found was posing in a nurse's outfit. Then when I came out here, the studio gave me a role with Frank Sinatra in "Never So Few." Yep, a nurse.

"It looks as if I'll never be free of a nurse's uniform."

Maggie smiled brightly and added that her role in the Kildare series will follow closely her own problems as a nurse—not being able to adjust to the unemotional aspects of nursing.

"I still want to be a movie star," she concluded, "but they aren't likely to cast me opposite Marlon Brando until I'm better known. And what better way is there to become known than in a TV series?"

"So it's back to the nurses uniform for me. At least I'll know what to do in the role."

Youth Lodged After Wall Street Chatter

Two 17-year-old juvenile boys from Klamath Falls were taken into protective custody by city police Saturday night and lodged in the county jail.

Police were summoned to Cubby's Drive-In, 1275 South Riverside ave., on report of a disturbance at that location. On arrival they noticed a large crowd forned around two boys who were fighting.

According to the police report, when an officer tried to break up the fight one of the boys resisted and shoved the officer. With the aid of a bystander police were able to handcuff and restrain the boy.

The youth was charged with disorderly conduct and resisting an officer, according to police.

The second boy was also taken into custody at the drive-in after city police found some bottles of beer in his car, according to the report. He was charged with illegal possession of intoxicating beverages.

Because the steel strike has been settled and the prospect of a railroad strike diminished, a railroad volume should improve this year, says Goodbody & Co. However, because of increased costs, something less than full benefits from the expected resurgence of revenues will be realized, it adds.

Youth Lodged After Wall Street Chatter

New York - (UPI) - The general public is in the market with a fervor and abandon unmatched since the pre-crash days of 1929, says Business Reports Inc.

"Let us keep in mind," the firm tells its readers, "that current stock prices are high—high by historical standards, by 'times-earnings' ratios, by dividend yields."

That's why it favors a high degree of selectivity, with most of its choices admittedly on the conservative "fuddy-duddy" side, the firm adds. However, if an investor feels he's in a position to speculate in any of the special situations, he'd better watch them very closely from now on, the letter cautions.

Because the steel strike has been settled and the prospect of a railroad strike diminished, a railroad volume should improve this year, says Goodbody & Co. However, because of increased costs, something less than full benefits from the expected resurgence of revenues will be realized, it adds.

Bache & Co. notes that Owens-Illinois Glass remains just below its 1959-1960 high and that the chart pattern of this issue continues to reflect strength.
