The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Raynaud's Disease

Quite a few nervous women want to know why they have Raynaud's disease. They get a cramping of the little blood vessels in some of their fingers, and, as a result, the fingers tend to become bloodless and white. In winter, the fingers may feel very cold. Often, if the patient thinks back, she can remember that the trouble came at a time when she was overwhelmed with some great sorrow, or great anxiety or disaster. Usually, there isn't much to do except to wear fur-lined gloves in winter. Some people could probably help themselves a good deal if they could only stay more calm and not blow their top so often, or to worry so easily. The person can make matters worse by smoking.

Spinal Anesthesia

Usually, spinal anesthesia is so safe that in many big medical clinics, hundreds or thousands of such anesthetics are given satisfactorily each year. A spinal anesthetic is particularly advisable in the case of a person who has severe disease in his lungs—flare up which might easily flare up into a pneumonia after the use of ether. When spinal anesthesia works well, it is ideal, and many a surgeon prefers it to any other form of anesthesia for operations on the lower half of the body. The only sad feature is that in rare cases—perhaps when the person happens to have some inflammatory or tumor-forming process silently at work in his spinal canal—the anesthesia will leave him more or less paralyzed from the waist down. In such unhappy cases, I have the deepest sympathy for the patient, but at the same time, I cannot see how the anesthetist or the surgeon or the hospital can be blamed. If I ever have to have my prostate gland operated on I'll probably accept the surgeon's orders, and take a spinal anesthetic. I'll know that I shouldn't be uneasy because the chances of my having any real difficulty are so very small.

EQUIPMENT LEASING

New York—UPI—The $200-million equipment leasing industry will more than double its volume in 1960, H. L. Meckler, president of Lease Plan International Corp. said in a year-end statement. He noted that 1959 volume was 10 times that of only seven years ago. He said businessmen are coming to realize that they can use capital outlays for other purposes when they lease equipment and that rental expenses are deductible for income tax purposes.

The United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization will sponsor a world census of agriculture in 1960.
