Medford Teacher Is Attending Institute

Tempe, Ariz.—Lester Hutchinson, of Medford, is participating in an "Academic Year Institute for High School Teachers of Science and Mathematics" at Arizona State University, Tempe. The institute is supported by the National Science Foundation. A teacher of mathematics and general science at McLoughlin Junior High School, Hutchinson was chosen to participate on the basis of his professional competence and his capacity to develop as a teacher, according to Dr. Alan T. Wager, chairman of the ASU department of physics and astronomy. The 50 participants in the program are taking full loads in science or mathematics either for a certificate of completion or for a master's degree in one of the four regular science graduate programs.

License Helps to Get Kitten Back

Greenville, Miss. — Here's one way to get back your lost pet. Nine-year-old Doug Grever owns a kitten that was giving him a hard time. It kept getting lost. So Doug thought up the idea of putting his father's license plate tag—the kind made by disabled veterans—on a chain around the feline's neck. It wasn't long before the kitten disappeared again. This time it was picked up by the SPCA, ownership was traced through the miniature license tag—and Doug got his kitten back.

Anniversaries Bring Traffic Tickets

Little Valley, N.Y.—Hurrying home to celebrate his 14th wedding anniversary, Harwood Rapp got a ticket for speeding. Rapp told the policeman it was his first ticket in 13 years, the other one having been given to him, when he was hustling to celebrate his first wedding anniversary. "And a funny thing," Rapp said, looking at his summons. "The officer who stopped me then was named Nelson, too." "Yes," said Patrolman C.E. Nelson Jr., "that was my father."
