California Student Ends Bread, Water Diet as Protest

Sacramento, Calif. - (UPI) - Bruce Bloomfield, 24, a student from the University of California at Berkeley, ended a bread and water diet today and wondered about some of the citizens he met on the California capitol steps.

And the citizens, judging from comments, were wondering about him and about why he carried signs asking Gov. Edmund G. Brown to spare the life of convicted kidnapper Caryl Chessman.

"I bet you'd like to go out and rape somebody yourself," an elderly lady said to Bloomfield last week.

Bloomfield, a mathematics student, said that many persons had called him a crackpot since he began his protest vigil outside the capitol Jan. 15. At that time, he declared that he would picket and live on bread and water for 11 days, one for each year that Chessman has been on San Quentin's death row.

Majority Opposes Idea
About 250 persons have talked to him in the past 10 days, Bloomfield estimated, and slightly more than 50 per cent opposed his plea for Chessman.

"Most of them asked me how I'd feel if Chessman had attacked my mother or sister," he said. He told them he wouldn't like it, but the point was whether or not Chessman got a fair trial.

On Saturday and Sunday Bloomfield got reinforcement from Bobby L. Jones, 30, a high school teacher from Woodland, Calif. Jones paraded with his own picket sign, objecting to Chessman's execution on a kidnap-robbery charge that no longer carries the death sentence.

"Why is Chessman being treated differently from the hundreds of others who did the same thing?" he asked.

No Word from School
Jones said that he heard nothing from his superiors at Woodland High school, where he teaches social studies. Asked what might happen if they objected to his public demonstration, he said, "I hope they don't, but nobody tells me what to think."

Both Jones and Bloomfield, who had never before met, said that this was the first time they had made public protestations. But both said they would continue the Chessman appeal, Jones on weekends in Sacramento, and Bloomfield at the university.

Asked about their families, Jones said that his wife was in sympathy with his actions. Bloomfield said that he had received a letter from his mother in Portland, where his father owns an auto wrecking yard.

"She said that anything I do is all right with her, just as long as I'm sincere about it," he said.

Former S.S. Sergeant Sentenced To 16 Life Imprisonment Terms

Only his eyes gave him away. "He looks almost like a gentleman today, but his eyes are the same - just like a wild and crazed animal," a witness said. Bugdalle was sentenced last week after only three days proceedings to 16 times life imprisonment at hard labor. Evidence in those three days was enough to brand him a sordid murderer. What turned Bugdalle, born the son of a respectable working-class family, into a torturer, killer and sadist? The most simple explanation was given by a court doctor who said: "Bugdalle is an untalented, limited and primitive man. The roots of his atrocities can be found in his sudden change from a nobody to a man with power who felt himself bigger than harmless prisoners."

Bugdalle was born Sept. 11, 1907, in Pommsen, Saxony. His father Wilhelm and mother Emma both worked in factories. After struggling through school he became a wheelwrights apprentice at 12.

As in school, his limited intelligence prevented him from learning a great deal. In 1931, when Germany's economic crisis was at its worst, Bugdalle became one of the thousands of unemployed.

Nine months later he joined the National Socialist Party, and the Nazi S.S. Elite Guard. In 1937, Bugdalle was posted, in his new rank as S.S. Sergeant, to guard duty in the Sachsenhausen Concentration camp.

'Most Dreaded'
There he became, as trial witnesses unanimously testified, "the most dreaded guard of them all."

What Bugdalle did to earn that title went into trial records as one of the most brutal records of atrocities ever committed in the name of the Nazi sense of perverted justice.

He was whipped and kicked prisoners to death, suffocated 15 at a time in a broom closet, shot and hung them and tortured and froze them to death.

Despite his limited intelligence, Bugdalle was clever enough to keep out of the hands of the war crimes courts.

By some means he became an American Prisoner of War and in 1946 was released as "a non-commissioned officer in the 4th Infantry Regiment."

Until 1948 he worked as a laborer for the U.S. Army and from 1948 until his arrest in December, 1957, lived and worked in Munich with his own name with a floor manufacturer and a railroad goods car maker.

Police said he managed to live so long undiscovered because former Sachsenhausen prisoners knew him only by his nicknames, "Brutalle," "Brutalla," or "Bugdalla."

It was a man of one of these three names for whom police searched, not knowing they were only nicknames.

Mr. Westbrook died Jan. 17 at the Siskiyou General hospital, Yreka, shortly after being admitted. He suffered a heart attack earlier in the afternoon, at his home on the Klamath river seven miles below Hornbrook.

Mr. Westbrook was born May 30, 1906, in Kansas City, Kan., and was raised at Moberly, Mo., where he attended the public schools. On Sept. 7, 1925, in Moulton, Iowa, he was married to Eva Pauline Morrow. The couple made their home in Napa, Calif., for 12 years prior to coming to this area in 1945. He had been associated with his brother A. (Bud) Westbrook as a painting contractor, the two brothers then founding the Siskiyou Paint and Wallpaper company in Yreka which they sold a few years later to E. W. Peterson. He built the family home, which is located on the bank of the Klamath river, a short distance above its confluence with the Shasta river.

Mr. Westbrook is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Audrey Langlo, Yreka; a son, Paul M. Westbrook Jr. of the U.S.S. Porterfield, now stationed in Hong Kong; a brother, A. (Bud) Westbrook, Yreka, and a sister, Mrs. Opal Matson, Ontario, Calif.

Funeral services were held on the arrival of Paul Jr. from the Orient. He arrived in Yreka Thursday.

After retirement from the bench in 1939, Mr. Luttrell entered semi-retirement from law practice for several years of rest and travel until re-opening a law office in Yreka. He had been hospitalized in Yreka since May, 1958.

Mr. Luttrell was a 50-year member of the IOOF lodge with original membership in the Fort Jones lodge. He was a past president of the Yreka Lions club and a member of the Masons.

He was married in 1907 to Winifred Morley, daughter of a pioneer Scott valley family, who preceded him in death in 1949.

He is survived by two sisters, Emma Luttrell, Yreka, and Mrs. Martha Norton, Sacramento; a brother, George E. Luttrell, Yreka, and several nieces and nephews.

PAUL M. WESTBROOK - Hornbrook - Funeral services for Paul M. Westbrook, 53, well-known Yreka painting contractor, were held Thursday at 3 p.m. at Girdner's Funeral chapel, Yreka. Burial was in the Henley-Hornbrook cemetery. The Rev. Harold Coleman of the Yreka Methodist church was the officiating clergyman.

CHARLES J. LUTTRELL - Hornbrook - Funeral services for Charles James Luttrell, former superior court judge for Siskiyou county and a lifelong resident of the Scott valley and Yreka areas, were held Saturday afternoon at the Masonic temple, Yreka. Mr. Luttrell was 85.

Burial was in the family plot in Fort Jones cemetery. Mr. Luttrell died at Siskiyou County General hospital the morning of Jan. 20 after a long illness.

He served three terms as superior court judge in Yreka, with 18 consecutive years on the bench from 1920 until his retirement in 1939. He was born in Fort Jones in 1875 and spent his childhood on the Luttrell ranch in Scott valley.

Following completion of public schools in this area he passed the county teachers' examination at the age of 18 and taught in Siskiyou public schools until he enrolled in Ann Arbor law school in Michigan. He was graduated with a degree in law in 1901. He returned to this area to begin practice in Yreka that same year and was elected county district attorney in 1902, an office which he held until returning to private practice in 1911. He entered a law partnership with Maj. Horace Ley which continued until his election as superior judge in 1920.

Trading on Stock Market Declines to Three-Month Low

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor
New York - (UPI) - Stock trading the past week declined to a three-month low with prices again registering a decline in all major departments.

A decline that had been in progress since the industrial average hit a new record high on Jan. 5 at 685.47 seemed to have run its course by the Wednesday close.

Trading for the week amounted to 14,219,090 shares, or a daily average of 2,843,818 shares. That was the smallest for a full week since Oct. 23 when the weekly total was 13,886,806 shares. So far this year sales have totaled 49,926,872 shares, against 60,939,271 shares a year ago.

At the close Wednesday, the industrial average showed a loss from its 1960 high of 41.78 points or 6 per cent. Ralls did much better and utilities performed best of all.

The market fell of its own weight. There was a minimum amount of selling. Demand equally was lacking. Bears remained idle and the short interest fell off to a new low. The short interest also declined on the American Stock Exchange.

Money remained tight but the Federal Reserve retained its discount rate at 4 per cent, possibly awaiting end of the Treasury's $11 billion refunding job scheduled for next week before a rise. The Bank of England raised its discount rate from 4 per cent to 5 per cent, and one British source said this was done in anticipation of a rise at New York next Thursday.

Inflation received a blow as a market factor when the President released his budget figures, anticipating a surplus of $4.2 billion which was what he had said previously.

The selling that took place in 11 of the first 13 sessions of the year hit the blue chips and the glamor stocks hardest. Losses in the former ranged to $20 a share in Du Pont and in the latter to $11.50 a share in Motorola.

Business news continued highly favorable, and several experts were revising upward their anticipations for the recovery movement. At the end of last year they had made rosy predictions for a boom through 1960. These were revised later to apply to the first half. This week some extended their second thoughts of the extent of the recovery movement.

Steel operations were around a record high. Automobile output hit a four-year high and truck output was the best in four and a half years. Car loadings rose on the week end and were above last year and 1958.

Construction slipped a bit but the total for the year to date was well above a year ago. Electricity output and coal output dipped from the previous week but held above a year ago. Retail trade was 1 to 5 per cent higher than a year ago.

At the week end steel operations were 31.9 per cent above a year ago, electric power production up 6.8 per cent; coal output up 6.4 per cent; and car loadings up 3.3 per cent. Wholesale food prices were down nearly 7 per cent and the cost of living index for December showed a dip of one-tenth of one per cent to a new low since October.

Railroad bonds led bonds higher and lifted the Dow-Jones average for 40 representative bonds to 81.09 up 0.12 point. Income rails gained 0.49 points to 65.31.

Louisiana Man Arrested by Ashland Police

Ashland - City police officers turned "anglers" Friday night to snare a 33-year-old Louisiana Fish.

William Gordon Fish of Shreveport, is being held in county jail on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Police said a complaint also will be signed charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Fish, a traveling magazine salesman who arrived in this area with his wife, Barbara, eight days ago, is suspected of passing at least four "rubber" checks while making purchases in order to obtain cash.

Ashland police, who arrested Fish as he was heading south through town, supposedly back to Louisiana, said the man had a loaded .22 caliber revolver on the front seat of his car at the time of his arrest.

Also in the car, they added, were three rifles, numerous hunting knives, and several cameras, radios, binoculars and other miscellaneous items.

Sporting Goods
Fish, police stated, wrote a $10 check on a Louisiana bank to purchase a holster for a sporting goods store here Friday. He pocketed the change, they said, and returned later in the day when he wrote a $30 check to buy a fishing tackle box.

He collected his change, police said, and went to Medford, where he traded in an old revolver for a new one, writing another check to pay the difference.

Later, they said, he wrote a $93 check for his rent to the proprietor of the Ninety-Nine Motel in Medford. He received $50 in change.

Medford police were told of Fish's transactions and alerted Ashland police.

Fish was arrested moments after police here had set up a road block at the north end of town. His wife later was released.

Fish previously served a prison sentence in Virginia on check charges, Ashland police said.

An Ashland police spokesman stated that only four of Fish's checks have been received by the department so far, but "we don't know how many others may be out."
