ASHLAND BURN AREA Timber Goes to Medford Bidder

Timber Products company, Medford, was the high bidder for 3,900,000 board feet of fire-damaged Rogue River National forest timber at a sale Monday.

The timber is in the area burned by the Ashland fire of Aug. 8, 1959. The purchaser's bid totaled $55,010. To provide access to the timber the purchaser will be required to build five miles of forest service, standard single land logging road, unsurfaced. It is estimated that the road will cost the purchaser about $70,277.

Kogak Manufacturing company was runner up for the timber. Lithia Lumber company, Ashland, also bid. The forest service's appraised price was $49,160.

Forest Supervisor C. E. Brown explained that an extra careful job of road and logging engineering was done so watershed damage would be kept to a minimum while salvaging the timber, reducing the fire hazard, and providing for reforesting the burned-over area.

Klamath Falls Company Ellingson Lumber company, Klamath Falls, was high bidder Jan. 22 for 1,500,000 board feet of national forest timber in the Dry Creek area, of the Klamath district. Ellingson's bid was $51,740.

The forest service's minimum acceptable bid for this timber was set at $49,650. The timber is accessible to existing roads and no road construction is required of the purchaser.

Runner up for the Dry Creek timber was Simplot-DeVoe Lumber company, Chiloquin. Klamath Lumber and Box company, Inc., and Thomas Lumber company also bid.
