Today & Tomorrow

WEAPONS AND SPACE

The argument about our defenses, which is now raging, revolves around what used to be called the "missile gap" and is now called the "deleterious gap." The gap in either version is the next few years when the Soviet Union will have in operation perhaps three times as many long range missiles as we have.

In this period of time the Soviet Union will be able, says General Power, the Commander of the Strategic Air Force, to "virtually wipe out our entire nuclear (retaliatory) strike capability within a span of 30 minutes." Theoretically then, the Soviet Union would no longer be deterred since it could knock us out before we could answer back.

The Administration's view is that this is an abstract theoretical equation - General Power called it "a mathematical probability" - which in fact and in reality the Soviet Union could not and would not act upon. For the total retaliatory power of the United States and its allies is to be measured not only in missiles but in manned bombers which can be kept in the air, and by other strategic weapons such as submarines and mobile missile bases.

ON THE nearer issue of whether we shall soon be at the mercy of the Soviet Union, the Administration has, it seems to me, a good case. It doubts General Power is right to insist upon the "mathematical probability" that 150 long range missiles and another 150 medium range missiles could in half an hour destroy the 100 installations and facilities from which we can launch a nuclear reply. But while this is a good and sufficient reason for strengthening our retaliatory force and of spending the money to protect it, there is a bigger issue which we need to ponder and to discuss.

The deep weakness in the Administration's position is not that we cannot deter the Soviet Union in 1963. It is that in the general field of rockets and the exploration of space we are not even holding our own. We are falling behind. The Administration case, although good enough on the risks of war in 1963, contains within it a great and quite unfounded assumption.

This assumption is that although the Soviet Union is now ahead of us, we are in the process of catching up. This supposes that we are now moving faster than the Soviet Union is moving. There is no reason to think that this is true. Almost certainly the truth is that they are moving faster than we are.

This is the most serious of all the gaps. It is that, despite the genius and talent available, our science and technology are less good than that of the Soviet Union. WE HAVE all asked ourselves why. My own view, for what it may be worth, is that our second-rate-ness stems from a false conception of the whole matter and from a fundamentally wrong decision. The false conception is the President's belief that there are two separate and distinct fields - one for military weapons and the other for the exploration of space. From this fallacy stems the decision to leave the development of the missiles to the military services and to treat the exploration of space as a form of boon-doggling, of no concern to our safety and with no serious claims on the budget.

From this comes, so I am convinced, the fact that the armed services find it very hard to recruit and to hold on to the very best scientific minds of the country. The very first rate men will not devote their lives to making a weapon that will soon be obsolete. These same men are often not recruited for the space exploration because the whole effort there is starved for money.

THE SECOND-rateness of our performance is due to the fact that our programs - military and for space - do not invite and encourage the very first rate minds. I am afraid that the reason why the Soviets are ahead of us is that their military weapons and their space rockets are under the control, not of the soldiers and not of the factory managers, but of the scientists. Men of genius cannot do what they are capable of doing if, as is the case today, they are herded into separate compartments and told to devote themselves to limited aims. They will respond best if they can believe that they are part of a great inquiry and experimentation into the nature of the universe. In all the flourishing periods of discovery and invention the air men breathed stimulated them to look beyond the horizon.

There is no such favoring climate today. Instead we have a philistinism which supposes that the most original and first rate minds can be hired for any job that the boss chooses for them. And we have a materialism which regards the exploration of space, and indeed the exploration of the unknown, as less important than the multiplication of consumer goods. Such philistinism and materialism are the attributes of a declining and second-rate power, and they are our real cause for concern.

Funeral Services Saturday for Mrs. John Gore

Funeral services for Mrs. John G. Gore, a pioneer resident of the Rogue River valley, will be held Saturday, January 30, at 10:30 a.m. in the First Presbyterian church, Medford, with Dr. D. Kirkland West officiating.

Mrs. Gore, the former Robin L. Warner, came to Medford with her parents, Lyman B. Warner and Harriet Nye Warner, from Neligh, Neb., arriving July 29, 1894. She was born in Champaign, Ill., January 19, 1863, and celebrated her 97th birthday last week. Mrs. Gore was graduated from Gates college in Nebraska which later became part of Doane college. A teacher, she taught in Nebraska and in the Medford and Ashland schools from 1894 to 1899, holding a life certificate in Oregon. She was one of the organizers and early officers of the Medford Parent-Teachers association.

Her many interests and activities included music and painting, also needle work which she pursued to within the last months of her life. She was widely read and was deeply interested in world and local affairs to the end of her life.

From early girlhood Mrs. Gore was active in church work, holding offices in the Medford Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society in the 1890's. In later life she was a dedicated Sunday school teacher and at her death was the oldest member of the Medford First Presbyterian church. On Sept. 27, 1899, she was married to John Gilmore Gore, who preceded her in death in March of 1950. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Gore made their home south of Medford on the Emerson Gore donation land claim of 1852.

Survivors include four daughters, Mrs. George Henry, Philadelphia; Mrs. Ray LeDoux, Medford; Mrs. Stewart Jones, Springfield, and Mrs. Marvin Person, Burbank, Calif., all of whom were here for her 97th birthday; two sisters, Mrs. Edward E. Gore and Miss Beulah Warner, and a brother, William J. Warner, all of Medford. She had eight grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Burial will be in the Phoenix cemetery. Perl funeral home is in charge of arrangements.

Another Chapter In Ring Closed

Salem - (UPI) - Another chapter in the smashup of a tri-state insurance swindle ring has been closed.

Albert Schoene and Clifford Parkins pleaded guilty in Marion Circuit Court Tuesday to charges of conspiracy to commit a felony and larceny. Each received suspended three-year sentences. They were paroled from Washington state prison last week and brought here to face the charges. They served time on similar charges at Walla Walla.

Eight other persons have been convicted in connection with the ring's activities, which included operations in Oregon, Washington and California. Members of the ring set up fake traffic accidents and collected insurance payments. Authorities estimated that companies were swindled out of about $69,000.

Parkins and Schoene were charged with a specific accident near Stayton, Ore. Authorities here have one warrant left. It is for Walter Schoene, who the Marion county district attorney's office said is serving a term in the Washington state reformatory in Monroe.

4-H Club News

Eagle Point Ranchers
The Eagle Point Ranchers 4-H Livestock club met at the Eagle Point Vocational Agricultural building, Jan. 25, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting was called to order by vice president Kenneth Dowell. The club pledge was led by Dan Burrill. Roll call was taken and there were 15 members and 3 parents present. Under old business, Frances Huffman gave a talk on "Making a Sheep Blanket." There was no more old business, so under new business Mr. Dowell gave a talk on different types of sheep parasites. The next meeting will be Feb. 8, at 7:30 p.m., at the Eagle Point Vocational Agricultural building. Anyone interested in taking any type of livestock is invited to attend.

Korny Kamps

The Korny Kamps, outdoor cookery club, will hold their first meeting of the year Jan. 31, at 1 p.m. at the home of Susan and Craig Wright, 3321 Jacksonville highway. All those interested in joining are invited to the short business meeting. Reporter pro-tem, Susan Wright.

Of the 60 million individual Federal income tax returns filed for 1957, the latest year for which official figures are available, 29.1 percent came from taxpayers reporting incomes ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Canadian professor and humorist, once told his American colleague, Irwin Edman, a story about a practical college student. "I have decided," said the student, "that this fall I will take courses in Turkish, music and architecture."

"An odd combination," commented Leacock. "Do you expect to be choir-master in a Turkish cathedral?"

"Not at all," answered the unsmiling student. "Those courses come at 9, 10, and 11 o'clock."

In a southern court, a local socialite, obviously overripe on the bough, stepped up to the witness stand. "Clerk," ordered the judge, "I will swear this witness in myself, Madam, how old are you?"

"Precisely," nodded the judge solemnly. "And now, do you solemnly swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?"
