

College Staff Members Circle Globe on Missions

Corvallis - Staff members from Oregon State college were called upon to serve as "know-how" ambassadors to foreign countries in every section of the world last year.

Their short-term assignments as consultants and advisers came either at the request of the foreign country or as part of the U.S. technical assistance program overseas.

The number of staff members selected for the special assignments and the wide range of fields in which they were chosen is evidence of the high regard held for OSC scientists, college officials noted.

An OSC staff member, for example, was one of seven U.S. scientists picked to go to Russia on a six-week radiation biology exchange program. Another was called to Ethiopia to assist that government in a three-month nutrition survey and one went to Nigeria, Africa, to help in crop development.

Brief Assignments

Other staff members accepted brief assignments to India for work in entomology and dairy production; to Puerto Rico for work on development of new food products; to the Philippines to develop controls for a destructive coconut disease; to Spain as an American delegate to the International Trade Fair; to France, England, Germany, Japan, and South America for other advisory missions.

Still another OSC scientist was picked for a three-month assignment as consultant on seed production in eight countries - Turkey, Cyprus, Jordan, Pakistan, India, Ceylon, Iran and Nepal.

For the past 5½ years, OSC has provided technical assistance to Kasetsart university in Thailand under an agreement between the two institutions and the U.S. and Thai governments. Selected OSC staff members have gone there for special assignments and Kasetsart staff members brought to this country for training. This program will be concluded in April.
