

Oregon Couple's Hobby: Collecting Driver's Licenses

Bedford, England - (UPI) - Mr. and Mrs. James L. Bromfield of Newport, Ore., make a hobby of collecting driver's licenses all over the world. But they flunked in Bedford.

Bromfield, 72, a retired motel owner, was born in England but moved to the United States. He is one of the 100 senior surviving members of the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain.

The organization gave him a pre-World War I race driving license for Brooklyn, N.Y. where much race driving was done before the first world war.

Later he passed tests in Hong Kong, the Philippine Islands, Malaya, Oregon and Vancouver, B.C. His wife Ida obtained her first driver's license in 1907 and later qualified in Malaya, Philippine Islands, Cairo, Oregon and drove a school bus in Newport.

The Bromfields said they were tempted to try the test in Bedford when they heard that an English woman who drove during the war for the army had failed her test.

"We thought we would have a go," Bromfield said. "But the tester in Bedford, did not like my driving or my wife's. He failed us both."

Bromfield said the tester objected to the way he and his wife waded into a right hand turn between gaps in traffic instead of waiting.

"But he also didn't like my not using the handbrake while turning around in a narrow street," Bromfield added. "He admitted I was expert enough not to have to use it, but he said it was required in the regulations."

"But the tester said he had a lot of trouble with Americans so perhaps there is a prejudice," Bromfield said.

The American couple can use their home state license while they are in Britain, but refusing to take defeat, they've both decided to try the British driving test elsewhere than Bedford.

Algiers - (UPI) - A clandestine French settlers' organization Saturday greeted members of a three-man task force sent to Algiers by President Charles de Gaulle with leaflets urging leniency for the leaders of last week's insurrection.
