The Medical Roundup

A Case of Hysteria

Every so often when I read that some person has been awarded $200,000 because he or she was paralyzed from the waist down by the injection of some drug that has proven itself harmless in a half-million cases, I wonder if the disease was the very common hysteria. That disease can produce almost anything in the way of spectacular symptoms. Often we physicians are almost certain that a neurotic person's paralysis or severe illness is due to hysteria, but it may be very hard to prove. I just heard Lowell Thomas tell of a young lady from Ragusa in Italy, who, after an accident, lost her voice and just whispered. A good physician should have known that the most likely cause of the woman's trouble was hysteria. Unable to be sure of it, the Italian physicians wheeled her into an operating room. There she sat up and said loudly, "Let me out of here; I do not need any operation."

What to Do With an Enlarged Gland

People ask me what should be done with a large gland (lymph node) which has appeared in their neck, and instead of going down, is slowly enlarging. I think their home physician would agree with me that often the thing to do, and to do quickly, is to cut down on the lump and either take it out or remove a little of it for microscopic examination. This will enable the physician to tell if it is only an inflammation, or if it is a cancerous daughter-growth (metastasis). If it should be cancerous, the nature of the cells may suggest that the main growth is in the back of the nose, or the inner lining of the skull, or the thyroid gland, or the lungs, or the stomach. Sometimes the growth and the gland can be shrunk up with powerful radiation, as from a cobalt bomb.

Fire Damages Firm in Eugene

Eugene—UPD—Sarchet Music company suffered an undetermined amount of damage in a three-alarm fire in the downtown district Sunday afternoon. Six trucks assisted in the blaze which also damaged business establishments on either side of the music company.

A fireman, Donald Lawdell, suffered a serious cut on his left leg from breaking glass during the fire. He was taken to Sacred Heart hospital for X-rays.

The fire broke out about 4:30 p.m. and was under control about 5:10. Eugene police blocked off three blocks surrounding the blaze.

Cause was undetermined.

Washington—UPD—The House Rules Committee held another hearing Monday on the proposed civil rights bill but found no witnesses present to testify either for or against.
