Is Mysterious Woman in Black Forest of Germany Really Grand Duchess Anastasia?

Editor's note: Forty years ago this month, aBerlin police sergeant jumped into a canal to rescue a young woman attempting suicide. In a hospital later she mumbled that she was the Grand Duchess Anastasia Nikolaevna, daughter of the last czar of Russia and only survivor of the massacre of his family by the Bolsheviks in 1918. Is she a member of royalty or a Polish peasant or adventurer? The controversy which has raged for years finally may be settled by a Hamburg court.

United Press International sent staff writer Robert Musel to Germany to talk to both sides in what one of the original Berlin police inspectors in the case called "a mystery equal to that of the man in the iron mask." Following is the first of three Musel dispatches.

By ROBERT MUSEL

Hamburg, Germany – (UPI) – When the assassin Yurovski led the Russian royal family down into the lower floor room of the house in Ekaterinberg (Sverdlovsk) chosen as their place of execution he observed a grisly protocol.

Czar Nicholas II sat on one chair with his sickly son, the Czarevich Alexe, on a chair beside him to the right. The Czarina sat on another chair with her four daughters grouped about her. They did not know why they had been summoned from their beds on that bloody night of July 17, 1918.

They did not know the picked squad with Yurovski had been issued with new revolvers, that in the woods nearby, at a mine pit called "the mine of the four brothers" there was sulphuric acid and gasoline for destroying their bodies so that royalists would never have even a single relic about which to rally.

Slaughter Sickens Killer

When the slaughter was done, and even some of the hardened killers were sickened, a soldier tried to turn over the body of one of the women and she screamed. Another soldier stepped forward and smashed at her face with his rifle butt.

Was this girl who screamed the 17-year-old Grand Duchess Anastasia? Did the rifle butt kill her? Or did it merely crush her jaw and teeth and leave her unconscious?

Does Anastasia still live today?

Recently I stood in the hilltop village of Unterlengenhardt in the Black Forest of Germany.

Above a closely fabricated fence of saplings I could see the upper part of a small green hut perhaps 15 feet square once used for storage by a Germany army unit. In this hut lives a true woman of mystery.

Since 1933 she has been suing to have herself declared Nikolaevna, daughter of Czar Nicholas II.

Opponents – German Royalty

Her opponents are members of the royal house of Hesse whose members include the Queen of Sweden and Earl Mountbatten of Burma, and Princess Andrea of Greece who is the mother of the Duke of Edinburgh, husband of Queen Elizabeth of Britain. They say she is a Polish peasant adventuress, and they deny that money is involved.

She claims that in the confusion of the charnel house, with the murder squad desperately anxious to dispose of the evidence of their crime, the bodies of the Romanovs were not checked as they were piled on a truck for the ride to the funeral pyre and she was hidden by two contrite Red guards.

Then, delirious for weeks, she was taken in a cart across Russia and to safety in Romania.

No one in the village has seen her since last summer, with the exception of Fraulein Isa Mayhof who brings her meals. Her only contact with the outside world is the telephone – and only a tiny handful of people know her number. I obtained it and called her.

"Who are you?" said a voice in good English.

Phone Switched Off

Before I could reply the phone switched off.

A few yards up the road in a modest white cottage – her own magnificient castle of Siebeneichen is lost in Communist East Germany–a nurse gave Baroness Monica von Militz the closest friend of the pretender, an injection against a heart condition so she could talk to me.

The baroness believes implicitly that the woman is the real grand duchess for instinctive rather than factual reasons – "If you know the difference between royal and aristocratic manners, then you know she is who she purports to be."

Court To Decide

The trail to Unterlengenhardt began in this city where the decision on her identity will be handed down in the grey-brick civil court building. Meanwhile those who are neutral in the case generally call her "Mrs. Anna Anderson," a name she used when she was in the United States in 1928-1930.

If she loses, said her attorney Dr. Kurt Vermehren, she will sue again at the first opportunity. But if she wins. He leaned across the table and said:

"Then we will sue to establish her identity as the Czar's heir in England. And when this is assured we will ask the English banks to turn over to us the millions of dollars they are holding in one or another of the royal Romanov accounts.

He smiled as he mentioned estimates that the fortune might be anything between 70 million gold rubles ($58 million) and 40 million pounds sterling ($112 million).

BLOW FOR KENNEDY

Natchez, Miss. – (UPI) – The president of the Southern Baptist Convention says Baptists cannot support the candidacy of a Roman Catholic for president of the United States. Dr. Henry Pollard of Knoxville, Tenn., also said here Tuesday that "we Baptists believe in complete and absolute religious liberty for all men, and we cannot walk with those who deny this fundamental freedom on which every other liberty is founded."

defy wind and water

In an actual test J-M Seal-O-Matic Shingles withstood the terrific blasts of an aircraft engine. Wind and water were driven at 100 m.p.h. against a panel of these shingles for an hour, with frequent gusts up to 140 miles per hour ... not a tab lifted ... not a drop leaked through.

Here's the secret of this amazing shingle. A stripe of special petroleum resin is factory-applied on the underside of each shingle. The sun's heat seals it to the underlying shingle, defying even high winds to pry it loose. Drop in and let us give you a personal demonstration of these patented Seal-O-Matic Shingles.
