

OLCC Rules on Bowling Alleys

Portland — (UPI) — The Oregon Liquor Control Commission Wednesday clarified its regulations applying to bowling alleys which have licenses for alcoholic beverages.

The OLCC said that sales, services and consumption must be confined to lounge and restaurant areas.

The Commission ruled that services and consumption are not to be permitted in the alleys.

Successful 'Hi-Fi' Produces Mumbles

Watkinsville, Ga. — (UPI) — Roy Crowley hailed his "hi-fi" speaker arrangement as a complete success after it produced mumbles instead of jazz.

Crowley had connected a microphone in his grocery with the speaker by his bedside as a "do-it-yourself" burglar alarm. Police said the mumbles plus noises of fumbling brought Crowley to the store where he caught Ernest Kile, 28, and Patrick Roberts, 18, in the act of burglary.

There were four trailer parks in New York City at latest count.

Goldwater Jet Plane Blows Tire

Spokane — (UPI) — A tire on an F-104 jet fighter plane piloted by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) blew out just after it touched down on the runway at Geiger Air Force Base Wednesday afternoon.

No one was hurt and officials said the aircraft was not seriously damaged.

Goldwater, a brigadier general in the Air Force reserve, had been flying the Lockheed Starfighter for about half an hour under direction of Capt. Maurice A. Shaff.

Ullman Opposes Porter's Crater Lake Chairlift Idea

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

Washington (Special) — Rep. Al Ullman believes he holds the whip hand over Rep. Charles O. Porter on the question of installing an aerial gondola in Crater Lake National Park — and Ullman is strongly opposed to it.

Congressman Porter has been trying to arouse support in Oregon for the project by which tourists would be transported down to the surface of the scenic lake and returned up the steep grade by a mechanical contraption which he thinks could be obscured by foliage.

"We don't want a Coney Island atmosphere in our national parks," declared Congressman Ullman.

He said the installation of such a device would be "contrary to the basic concept of the national parks."

Ullman noted that he is a member of the House Interior Committee, which handles all legislation dealing with parks. Crater Lake is located in his district, not Porter's, Ullman observed. He is also a member of the National Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, which is supposed to draft a report on the nation's needs for recreation areas for the future.

"I think in this instance I hold the whip hand over Porter," Ullman said of his Oregon Democratic colleague. "I wish he'd stay on some of his other pet projects."

The Baker solon said he thought continued advocacy of the project to be "highly unrealistic" because "there is not the slightest chance to get approval of it."

Porter's office is starting to tabulate a massive poll of opinion on the gondola idea. Questionnaires were sent to over 100,000 residents of his western Oregon congressional district. Crater Lake Park lies just east of the line which divides Ullman's eastern Oregon district from Porter's.

Praised and Condemned

The idea has been praised and condemned recently by a number of Oregon newspapers. The two largest newspapers in Porter's district, the Eugene Register-Guard and the Medford Mail Tribune, have come out editorially with scathing rebuke for the project. A third paper in Porter's district, the Grants Pass Courier, supports the venture.

Outside Porter's area, the Oregon Statesman at Salem has given its blessing to the chairlift, but the Corvallis Gazette Times has lampooned it.

Opposition editorials have expressed horror at the thought of defiling the natural setting of a national park with a mechanical contraption used to lure tourists down to Crater Lake.

For Older People

The Oregon Statesman supported the idea with this argument: "The hike from the rim of Crater Lake to the water level supposedly takes 20 minutes down and 40 minutes back up. Every year thousands of people, because of their age or physical ailments, stand at the rim wishing they could make the trip to the lake's edge. . . . As a nation we are growing older. More people are traveling after they retire. Our national parks should be a place for their enjoyment as well as for the rest of the population. We hope the chairlift is built for those who want the trail, it'll still be there."

"This is Porter's point precisely.

But how he will ever be able to implement the idea is a mystery. He won't necessarily need legislation approved by Ullman's committee, for the National Park Service could go ahead under its regular authority to improve the parks. The trouble is the park service officials don't regard this as an improvement — anything but. They will stall Porter as long as they possibly can.

Hart also reported that President Eisenhower has praised the "vigorous work" of the American Heart association in fighting heart disease. In a letter to Dr. A. Its vigorous work has earned wide praise and gratitude. I am confident that its program in research, education and community service will result in further health gains for our people."

Anaconda Copper Strike Settled

Butte, Mont. — (UPI) — The record 117-day strike against Anaconda Co. operations in Montana was settled today.

Three federal mediators who took part in the negotiations announced the settlement at 5:30 a.m. after 19½ hours of marathon bargaining.

The announcement said the 3,300 copper miners and smelters at Butte, Great Falls and East Helena would return to their jobs as soon as union members ratify the agreement. The workers are members of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, an independent union.

Details of the agreement were not announced, although a union spokesman said it was a three-year pact containing "substantial improvements in wages and contract terms."

Negotiations had broken down seven times previously since the bitter dispute began just eight days short of six months ago.
