"Look, Coach, I'm Dancing!"

WELL-KNOWN athletes frequently have turned entertainers. Johnny Weissmuller swam his way to Tarzan fame; Rocky Graziano plays character roles as well as he boxed—or almost; Chuck Connors wields a gun as easily as a baseball bat on TV's "Rifleman." But no red-blooded athletes danced ballet-style until the high-speed camera stopped their jumps, catches, swings, and kicks. At a 500th of a second, two men booting a ball resemble chorus girls; basketball players jumping for a rebound look as if they're rehearsing with Martha Graham. Here we offer a program of athletes as terpsichoreans, reminding Family Weekly readers of Samuel Johnson's opinion of dancing bears: "The remarkable thing is not that they dance well, but that they dance at all."
