

DON WILLIAMS
Named Representative

Representative of Swift Named Here

Don Williams, Portland, will assume duties in Medford March 7 as district representative in southern Oregon for the grocery division of Swift and company.

The announcement was made by Ed Morrow, Portland, sales manager for the Oregon division of Swift.

Williams, who is now refinery representative for the firm, has been assigned to the Portland office six years. He has been with the company for 12 years.

In making the announcement, Morrow explained that Glenn Branlund, local manager of Swift and company, will be in charge of the fresh and processed meats division. Company growth in southern Oregon was given for the reason of the reorganization here.

Williams, his wife, Gayle, and their two children plan to move here early next month. While in Portland, he was a member of the Elks lodge.

Snyders Given Week To File Plea

Portland - (UP) - Charles, Edward and William Snyder, indicted in connection with the Jan. 31 dynamiting of newspaper trucks, have been given another week in which to enter a plea after they asked the court to appoint attorneys for them.

Circuit Judge Charles Redding named attorney Edmund A. Jordan to represent Charles, Phil Engelgau to represent Edward and Malcolm J. Montague to represent William.

The Snyders have been indicted here and in Oregon City along with Gerald Couzens, 20, and Levi McDonald, 51, on charges of injury to property by explosives. Couzens appeared in court here Thursday and pleaded innocent. McDonald is scheduled to appear in court here next Tuesday to enter a plea.

Work Program for Welfare Favored

Portland - (UP) - Washington, Polk and Yamhill counties have reported favorably on a work program for welfare recipients at a meeting of the State Welfare Commission here.

The three counties said recipients who reported for work did a good job and those who did not report were dropped from the welfare rolls.

In Yamhill county, 18 men were terminated from assistance for refusing to work and Washington county reported two men refused to work.

Multnomah county welfare officials said the plan had been considered in the county and had been found "impractical" here.

In other commission action, a report of a pilot study in Washington county determined that 17,000 hearings would be necessary if claims against relatives are to be cleared up before the 1962 deadline set by the Legislature.

Employee Suggestion Brings $50 Award

Salem - (UP) - The State Employee Suggestion Awards board has awarded $50 to a telephone accountant for a proposed phone sticker which reads: "Be brief, give extension number, and make a record of your call."

The award went to Mrs. Marcelle M. Gayton, Salem, who is with the Finance and Administration department.

News About Books From the Library

Children's books filled the complete list of new titles last week at the Public Library of Medford and Jackson county.

Included is an excellent selection of science books for various ages. Copies will be available at both the downtown library and the branches.

Among the books are a collection of Boy Scout and Camp Fire Girl materials. Part of these were gifts from the two organizations and others were purchased by the library. The library now has a complete collection of merit badge pamphlets for the Scouts. The library hopes to work with the Girl Scouts and other youth serving agencies to help them supply their literature needs.

Underwriters Head Speaks in Medford

Oscar H. Specht, Salem, president of the Oregon State Association of Life Underwriters, addressed the monthly meeting of the Rogue Valley Life Underwriters association Friday on "Current Legislation before Congress that Affects the Life Insurance Industry."

Specht, speaking at the Rogue Valley Country club, mentioned the Forand Bill, one which would grant medical aid to the aged; the Keough Bill, and the Long Bill, which would grant GI insurance privileges to more than 14,000 veterans who were in the service any time from 1940-58.

Specht suggested that a panel of civic leaders be created to discuss the bills, their importance to the tax-paying public and the seriousness of their economic ramifications to every taxpayer.

BON VOYAGE—Lay it on the mild climate that stoves and stove pipe are practically non-existent in the Hawaiian islands. H. T. Donaldson, former Medford resident who now lives there, sent an urgent request to Siskiyou hardware store here this week for a length of six-inch pipe, an elbow, a collar and a damper so he could hook up his trash burner. He had searched the islands and found none for sale. Just for fun, Mrs. Harley Finney (above), who, with her husband, operates the store, attached a few leis to the pipe before sending it on its way. Donaldson lives in Hilo, 20 miles from the currently-active volcano. He also requested a Medford telephone directory, perhaps to save time in case there was something else he would need to order.

Smelt Transferred To Oregon Streams

Kelso, Wash. - (UP) - The State of Washington gave two truckloads of smelt to Oregon Friday in a transfer from the Cowlitz river to the Necanicum and Sandy rivers.

The fish lift was part of an experiment started last year to start smelt runs in Oregon rivers where the run is small or non-existent.

Superior Students May Get Top Jobs

Eugene - College graduates seeking jobs during the next few months will find that the job market is good, but that the top positions will be awarded to superior students.

The philosophy that a student may coast along with a "gentleman's C" may be a thing of the past as far as industry recruiters are concerned, according to Eugene W. Dils, director of the University of Oregon's placement service.

Dils, who recently returned from the Western College Placement association conference in San Francisco, said that industry recruiters are now placing an increased importance on the quality of student work. "This trend in the job market is so strong that if a student is to be satisfied with low grades, he should be satisfied with mediocre interest on the part of employers," Dils said.

Gamble Is Less
"This does not mean that they do not want the well rounded, All-American type," he said, "but industry has found that the selection and cost-of-training gamble is less for students with good grades."

Some governmental agencies may appoint graduates with B or better grade averages to the G.S. Federal Civil Service seven classification level, while students with slightly lower grades are appointed to the G.S. 5 level. The pay for this lower level amounts to $900 per year less than the higher rating.

Greater Choice
Much of this reluctance to hire mediocre students is due to the high cost of executive trainee programs, Dils explained. By the time a graduate becomes a producer in a corporation, the corporation may have invested as much as $10,000 in his training.

All students will have a greater choice of jobs this year. "We have more employers visiting the university than ever before," Dils said. Last year, 80 employers interviewed graduates during winter and spring terms. This year, he indicated that 110 employers will visit the university for recruiting purposes during the same period.

Dils uses this as a barometer of business activity. The orders for employees coming into his office provide the "freshest available information" about the job market, he said.

As an example of the opposite picture, he cited letters with the phrases "please cancel our visit" or "our needs are not as great" which crossed his desk in 1957 when business was shaken by the minor recession.

No sign of this has been seen this year, he said. In fact, just the opposite is true. College recruiting activity is decidedly brisk. Optimism is characteristic of the present economic outlook.
