

Finch, Paramour Said Characters of Shakespeare Drama

Los Angeles — (UPI) — Prosecutor Fred N. Whichello today launched the last act of his dramatic final arguments in which he pictures Carole Tregoff as Lady Macbeth who drove Dr. R. Bernard Finch to kill his own wife.

The jolly-looking Whichello, his pleasant manner cast by the wayside, has the last word among the attorneys in the love murder trial. The jury of seven women and five men may get the sensational murder case by Friday.

Pictures Carole's Motive

Whichello pictured the handsome surgeon, Miss Tregoff and Finch's slain wife as latter-day Shakespearean characters caught in a Macbeth-like tragedy.

Carole, 23, a beautiful young woman from modest beginnings, goaded the love-sick 42-year-old doctor into carrying out a brutal plan to kill his wife last July 18, Whichello said.

The motive: So that ambitious Carole could step up from being the receptionist at Finch's medical center to the lady of the house, Finch's wife, and therefore a woman of wealth, prestige and social position.

That's the picture Whichello painted as the drawn-out trial which started Dec. 8 drew to a close.

Calls Doctor Liar

His usual soft-spoken, even kindly words, suddenly dropping with scorn, Whichello called Finch a liar, an illicit lover and a deliberate killer.

"I will do most of my talking about Dr. Finch," Whichello told the jury. "But I'm not forgetting this latter-day Lady Macbeth at the other end of the table (Carole). She is really the aggressor and instigator of this whole thing, but Dr. Finch acted as executor of the plan."
