Demolition Order Given in Devastated Earthquake Area

Agadir, Morocco - (UPI) - Crown Prince Moulay Hassan today ordered rescue work to stop in the pestilence-threatened ruins of Agadir and demolition work to begin at once. This meant death to any of the living trapped in the rubble.

Rescue teams of many nations were picking through the ruins in hopes of finding a few more living in the devastated city where 5,000 to 8,000 persons were believed to have met death when an earthquake hit Monday night.

The threat of widespread epidemics among the living was so great the Crown Prince ordered the drastic move.

Thousands of persons were feared still trapped in the ruins of what had once been a beautiful and thriving resort city on the southern Atlantic Coast of Morocco. An unknown number of tourists were believed still buried.

Few Bodies Recovered

How many of the trapped were still alive may never be known.

Only 808 bodies had been recovered, recorded and buried.

The Crown Prince had hoped to hold off the demolition order for at least another day or two, but the rising risk of typhus or plague forced his hand.

Bulldozers leveled everything in their path. Medical crews followed, spreading quicklime.

The national police head informed King Mohammed V the death toll may rise to 5,000 or 6,000 - double the estimate of 3,000 fixed Wednesday by the International Red Cross. Disease could snuff out more of those buried alive.

Huge rats swarmed through the debris, occasionally brushing against the American, French and other rescue teams who with men from half a dozen other European nations tunneled cautiously under sagging ruins. Sewers ran open, contaminating even the sickly smell of death.

Dead Buried Quickly

Hundreds of American servicemen joined Moroccans and other military units in pulling more than 800 dead and 1,500 injured from the rubble by early today. The dead were buried in huge open trenches and quickly. The injured were being flown in a vast rescue operation to hospitals elsewhere in Morocco.

One of those rescued after three days in the wreckage of a once-luxurious hotel was Mrs. Sue Martin, of St. Albans, W.Va. Her husband, Gerald, an Air Force lieutenant, and their baby daughter were pulled out of the debris.

Grants Pass Man In One Car Accident

Harold Gunter Olson, 46, of 1050 N. E. Churchill st., Grants Pass, was treated at Rogue Valley hospital last night for facial injuries received in a one-car accident on Highway 66 near the Green Springs summit.

State police said Olson's car failed to make a sharp turn in the highway, left the road and traveled 50 feet on the shoulder before flying 25 feet through the air and coming to rest between two trees and the high embankment.

Olson remained in the hospital for observation, attendants reported. His car was removed by a wrecker from Ashland.
