

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a Judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history and the council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Nora B. - My sister goes out with married men. Harriet S. - She has a small town attitude.

Nora B. - I am a happily married woman, mother of three young children. I am worried about my single sister, who is a successful career woman in her early 30s.

Recently I spent a week with Harriet and I must confess I was pretty shocked about a lot of things. I know that Harriet is a fine person and a home-wrecker, but she has a few married men friends and thinks nothing of having dinner with them and going out for the evening.

I don't know what the wives of these men think. All I know is I would be furious and wouldn't stand for it - if I knew about it. Harriet says it's purely platonic and I'm sure she wouldn't lie to me, but I worry about her reputation.

Harriet S. - My naive little sister doesn't realize that there is no such thing as reputation in the city. Nobody knows or cares who I go out with. Occasionally when we are out, I may meet somebody who knows both me and my date, but that person could easily think we have a business engagement. In any case it's none of anyone's business. My attitude is that I go out with married men purely out of friendship. I certainly don't want to wreck anyone's home and the men I go out with understand that.

The fact is I find married men more interesting than most bachelors. Married men are usually more relaxed and help me relax and enjoy myself. My sister is taking this in a typically small town way.

The Council: We'll take Harriet's statement at face value and assume she is telling the truth about her motivation.

Nonetheless, she is making a big mistake on two scores. First, she overestimates the effects of geography on people's mind. A sophisticated city dweller wouldn't be caught dead raising an eyebrow at things that might leave a small town gasping, but that doesn't mean he doesn't think or gossip - in a sophisticated urban manner, of course.

Second, she is using married men to supply her with an imitation of the pleasure she might have through friendships with eligible men. She has even come to prefer the imitation to the real thing.

We think Harriet should recognize that the relaxed atmosphere she enjoys in a man's date is as much her making as it is the man's. It is possible that she feels relaxed because she does not expect anything significant to come out of the relationship. On the other hand, when she dates an eligible man, she feels challenged to achieve something important.

Despite her age and successful business experience Harriet evidently lacks the ability to be herself in a relationship with a single man. This acts as a block against her getting to really know the man. Harriet should consider the idea that the home she may be wrecking is the one that could be hers.
