Tony Marshall, president of the St. Mary student body, delivered an address of welcome to the Archbishop who, in turn, reminded the students that they (all youth) "are the future."

Use Opportunity

He urged them to take advantage of every opportunity given them in these, their high school days, which he described as the most vitally important days of their lives. It is now, he said, that they are developing the characteristics which will be most important to them individually, to society and to the interests of the future.

After the high school age, Archbishop Howard continued, there is just the development of the ideals which were already formed. Christian character, he said, is formed through repeated conscious acts and he advised the students to "live every day God has given you to draw closer to Him and to become more like Christ Who has taught you how to live and how to die."

Musical Program

The program was concluded by the Marian choir, singing "Listen to the Lamb" and "Follow Me Down to Carlow," an Irish folk tune arranged by Noble Cain.
