Tea Closes Year for Oregon's 1959 Mother

Oregon's 1959 Mother of the Year, Mrs. Harlan P. Bosworth Jr., closed her year last week with a small tea and a statement concerning projects of the American Mothers' committee and her own philosophy of life. The tea, held at the Bosworth home on East Main street, brought together a group of Mrs. Bosworth's friends and women who had cooperated in the national committee's projects through the Medford mother.

Three women who met Mrs. Bosworth because of her appointment, and present for the tea, were Mrs. Grover T. Mulkey, Gold Hill; Mrs. W. W. Brawn and Mrs. William Jeffrey, Medford. The three responded to requests of the national committee and Mrs. Bosworth, and expressed their ideas on better family living and child-rearing in letters to the Medford woman. They were introduced and received gifts.

Mrs. Brawn, who has four children, wrote that it seemed to her that "the moral fiber seems to be disintegrating and in its place (has come) the feeling of parents that every problem of their children is just due to a phase they are going through." She added that she believed parents need to exercise a "firm hand" and to start this firmness in the child's early life. If discipline is a part of the child's early life, by early teens he may be given his independence, Mrs. Brawn believes.

Mrs. Brawn also expressed interest in the field of nutrition, one of Mrs. Bosworth's major interests, and said that "after studying several books I am thoroughly confused."

The Gold Hill mother, Mrs. Mulkey, said she believed raising children is a most companionable in the family. These ingredients work.

Mrs. Jeffrey, who has had considerable material published, listed 10 "Suggestions warding career and that with her four children now on their own, "we have a feeling of accomplishment." The code by which we lived happily is simple," she wrote. "I would begin with love and companionship, the sharing of recreation and hobbies. Early discipline and work for every one is important, a shirker had to take the consequences. The members of a family must be taught cheerfulness, emotions must have a governor and each person's possessions respected. Manners and thoughtfulness lend much to family harmony.

Parental Help
"Each child followed his aptitudes with all possible parental help, and learned early the importance of making his own decisions. Training in citizenship, morals, religion and finances is necessary, but can go awry without love and for Happier Family Living" beginning with "learn the loving approach." She also advised "translate wishful thinking into action; view family troubles objectively; cultivate your sense of humor; analyze success stories; read good books; include Bible reading and prayer; discover that back of every idea lies the sacrifice of dedication; study families that are achieving happiness; be patient."

As part of the plan to promote better family living in America, the American Mothers committee is endeavoring to promote the habit of prayer among American families. The various state mothers were urged to form prayer groups. In line with this plan, Mrs. Bosworth asked Mrs. Jeffrey to speak on prayer at the tea Wednesday.

Confusion on Nutrition
Mrs. Bosworth also spoke of her year as Oregon mother and of some of her activities during the past year. In answer to Mrs. Brawn's statement of "confusion about nutrition," Mrs. Bosworth said there is much confusion and that it is the duty of parents to work at finding the truth. Later Mrs. Bosworth referred to the recent study conducted for the California School board during which the effect of better nutrition on problem children was surveyed. The conclusion reached was that many children doing poor work in school did so because of malnutrition; some authorities believe that as many as three-quarters of the nation's school children are improperly nourished.

Mrs. Bosworth told guests at the tea that many mothers accomplish better nutrition for their families by growing their own vegetables and fruits, and making their own bread from whole-wheat, properly ground flour. She recommended the publication, "Modern Nutrition."

Later in the week Mrs. Bosworth summed up her ideas on motherhood and family living and said "Parents have a responsibility to start their children on a way of life, and not just give them beliefs. It is very hard in this day and age to develop a good way of life. The ability to love has deteriorated. Man seems to be striving primarily for material success - we are judged for what we are worth in the market place.

Want to Improve
"I believe that most parents truly want to improve their way of life, and that of their children, particularly in the field of spiritual values. I believe that if we are to have an improved way of life, moral and ethical training must be regenerated. There are many levels of religious beliefs in this country, but we must not have an immature reliance on God as a kind parent; we must not turn to Him only in time of need and go our own way at other times. About God and religion we must be consistent.

"To speak of love is not preaching, for the simple reason that it means to speak of the ultimate and real need in every human being. Because that need is obscured does not mean that it does not exist. We must have faith that love can exist in the whole society - that general altruism can exist, not only in a few individuals but as a rational faith based on insight into the very nature of man."

Mrs. Bosworth's successor, announced last week, is Mrs. C. P. McCracken of Corvallis.
