

SOC Senior to Attend IRC Event at Harvard U.

Ashland - Dave Dickerson, Southern Oregon college senior, will fly to Cambridge, Mass., April 1 to attend the United States International Relations clubs conference on the campus of Harvard university. Dickerson will represent the Pacific Northwest IRC, of which he is president. The four-day national convention will have the theme "United States Foreign Policy in Africa," and purposes to deal with a study of American relations with the many-countried continent, Dickerson reported.

Also attending from the state will be Dr. Charles P. Schleicher, professor of political science at the University of Oregon, national IRC advisor, and Peter Wengert, University of Oregon student and national IRC vice president. To UN Meet After the conference, Dickerson will fly to the University of California campus in Berkeley to join the Southern Oregon college delegation to the Model United Nations, April 6-10. Eighty Pacific coast colleges and universities will attend the mock UN, each representing a country. Southern Oregon college will represent Iran, Dickerson reported. Dickerson was elected Pacific Northwest president of IRC at their annual conference at Reed college in Portland, Jan. 28-30. Dr. Clifford Miller, SOC advisor to the club, was elected regional advisor during the conference.

Construction of Water Main on Bartlett to Start

Construction of an eight-inch water main on Bartlett st. between Fourth st. and Mitchell Way, to be built by the Medford Water department, will start Monday. Robert Lee, city water superintendent, said the purpose of the main will be to increase the amount of water which would be available in case of fire in the area. The new main will supplement, not replace, existing four and six-inch mains which were installed in the area in the early part of the century, Lee said. The existing mains, he observed, will still be used, but they are no longer of adequate size to supply the required amount of water which should be available in case of fire. Much of the city's fire insurance rating depends on the amount of water which is available for fires, and for this reason the supplementary lines are being installed. The installation of the new pipe on Bartlett st. is but one part of a project undertaken in 1955 to lay additional water mains in this area of the city. The project is now nearly completed. Throughout the project, many fire hydrants have been installed or relocated and some new hydrants will be installed on the portion of the main now being constructed, according to Lee. It will take about a month to complete the main, he said.

Order Restrains Coos Prospectors

Coos Bay - Circuit Judge Robert C. Belloni Wednesday issued a temporary injunction restraining three prospectors from blocking a timber access road beyond their claim in the Upper Sixes river area. The order was imposed against Tim Bigelow, Duane Strong and Joseph Knox, for blocking a road belonging to Coos Bay Timber Co. The prospectors in turn filed a demurrer claiming their case should be tried in a Federal Court because the property is owned by the federal government. A hearing was scheduled for next week. The three men claim they have valuable copper and gold deposits on land for which they have validated claims pending. The company asked $1,000 a day since Jan. 2.

A 'B' FOR NIXON—Vice President Richard M. Nixon greets Mrs. Hazel Davenport, a Beckley, W. Va., school teacher, at the Capitol in Washington. Mrs. Davenport, a first grade teacher for the past 28 years, has been named McCall Magazine's "National Teacher of the Year." After watching Nixon pen a postcard, Mrs. Davenport said she might possibly give him a "B" in penmanship. (UPI Telephoto)

National Wildlife Week Is Planned

Portland—The United States forest service, in cooperation with National Wildlife Federation and other wildlife and conservation organizations, is giving recognition to National Wildlife Week, March 20-26. Regional Forester J. Herbert Stone, has announced. Information packets of material on wildlife and other conservation topics furnished by the National Wildlife Federation are being distributed from forest supervisor and ranger offices. Stone pointed out that under the multiple use plan of land management practiced by the forest service, wildlife is one of the major resources of the national forests. The other principal resources are water, outdoor recreation, timber and forage. Through the coordination of the uses provided by multiple use management, these resources will continue to increase on national forests of Oregon and Washington, he noted. Stone said, "As the demand for outdoor recreation increases, the protection and improvement of the wildlife habitat on the national forests becomes increasingly important, especially when one realizes that about a third of the country's big game and untold millions of small game and birds live on national forests."

Foreign Students To Visit Medford Tues., Wednesday

Sixteen students from as many countries of the world will visit Medford Tuesday, March 22, and Wednesday, March 23, as the guests of the Medford YMCA World Service program.

All 16 are students at the University of Oregon. Highlight of their visit to Medford will be a potluck dinner at the YMCA at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 22.

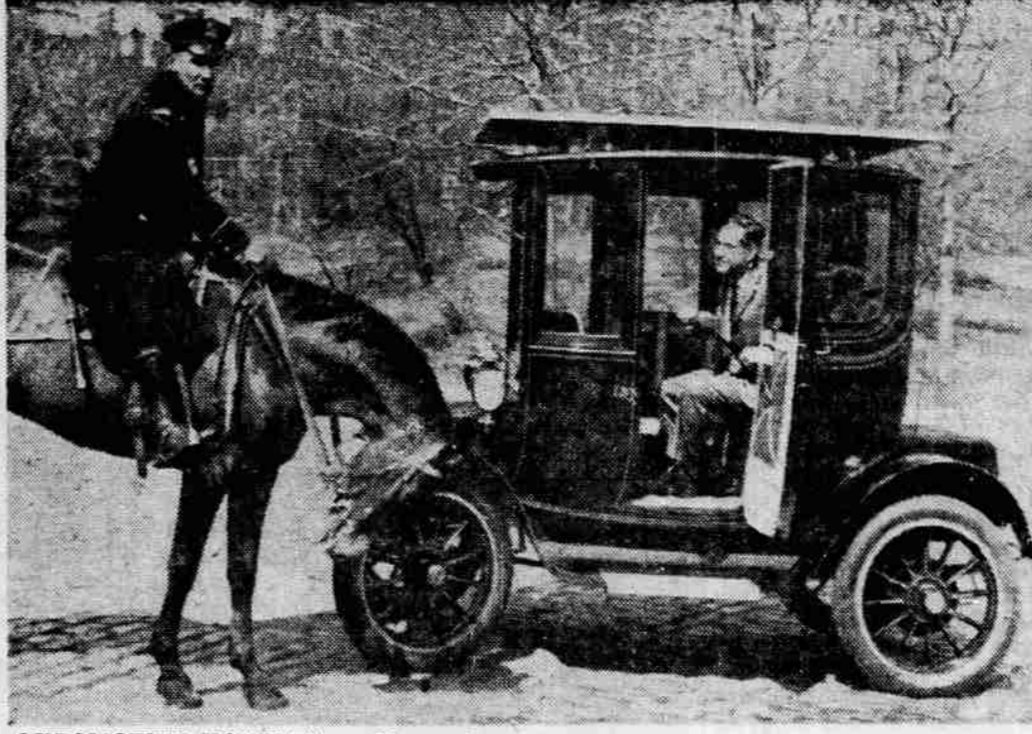

The program for the dinner will feature talks by each student about their native land and college studies. Musical entertainment also will be featured. Anyone may attend the potluck dinner, but each family is reminded that it must bring a hot dish and salad or dessert plus their own service.

Visit in Grants Pass
Mrs. Virginia Wickersham, YMCA World Service chairman, explained that "the students will arrive in Medford after a visit to Grants Pass and will spend the night here in the homes of Medford residents."

The International club of Medford High school, Mrs. Justin Smith advisor, will entertain the group at the high school Tuesday afternoon after the International Students have lunch with the Medford Rotary club.

At 4 p.m., the students will meet at the YMCA for a tea. At this time they will meet their host families for the evening.

Any one interested in hearing the group is invited to the potluck dinner Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the YMCA social hall, Mrs. Wickersham said.

AUTOMOTIVE NOVELTY — Mounted policeman James Lewis' horse seems to be bowing to a novelty in an antique form on occasion of the debut of a solar-powered car in New York's Central Park. The auto, a 1912 Baker Electric, was demonstrated by Dr. Charles Escoffery, at the controls, for the International Rectifier Corporation. Sunlight striking the large panel on the roof of the vehicle charges 12 standard storage batteries which supply the power to turn an electric motor that drives the auto at a dignified 20 miles per hour with a driving range of about 50 miles. Think small.

The Volkswagen is 4 feet shorter than a conventional car, yet has as much leg room up front as many big cars. Mother, father and three growing kids suit it nicely. So does regular gas, in surprisingly tiny amounts. Other than radio and side view mirror, we can't think of anything important that isn't included on the VW at its low price. Last year, almost 120,000 Americans thought small and bought VW Sedans. Think about it. While you have it in mind, come in and drive one.
