

Ike's Health Budget Request Increased By House Committee

Washington—UPI—The House appropriations committee today added $197,400,550 to President Eisenhower's budget for health, education and welfare, including an extra $1,060,000 for a broad federal attack on juvenile delinquency.

The committee charged that the President's request was inadequate to deal with a host of problems ranging from juvenile delinquency to difficulties of the aging.

The lawmakers allotted 21 per cent more than Eisenhower asked for educational programs and 14 per cent more for health programs.

The committee took the actions in sending to the House floor for action next week a $4,184,022,731 money bill. The funds are to finance the health, education and welfare department and related labor agencies in the fiscal year starting July 1.

Seawage Disposal Grants
The bill carried $3,619,044,531 for the health, education and welfare department, $133,670,450 more than the President asked. The labor department was voted $542,245,300, a reduction of $13,241,700.

The committee allotted $876,929,200 to the public health service, an increase of $113,300,200 over the budget. The Office of Education was allotted $479,836,331, an increase of $81,790,000.

The committee turned thumbs down on Eisenhower's proposal to cut back federal grants to help communities build sewage disposal plants to curb stream pollution. It voted $45 million for this, the same as last year. The President wanted only $20 million.

The committee also rejected administration plans to cut back federal grants to schools crowded by children of military and government personnel.

Problems of the Aging
The committee even complained that the President did not request enough money to finance next January's White House conference on problems of the aging. It approved $550,000 for this, an increase of $28,000 over the budget.

The committee also recommended $2,290,000 over the amount budgeted by Eisenhower for federal research to combat "environmental hazards" of modern civilization such as polluted air, water and food, radiation, and accidents.

Every penny of the $171 million budget estimate for the defense education program was granted.

The Family Council NAACP Claimed Losing Friends

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Jonathan D.—My wife won't forgive me.
Emily D.—The whole thing makes me sick.

Jonathan D.—I have been happily married for 14 years and am the father of five wonderful youngsters. My problem stems out of a business trip I had to take abroad last year.

I had been away from my family nearly two months and I met a fascinating woman during my travels. We were both alone in a beautiful city and enjoyed touring together. Eventually we became intimate. After a few days the whole thing was over and we went our separate ways.

A month ago this woman called and asked to see me. We went to dinner and the indiscretion was repeated. I told her it mustn't happen again as I love my wife and family, but she besieged me with calls and letters until finally my wife found out. Now she won't forgive me.

Emily D.—I don't think loneliness is any excuse. I was lonely too while Johnny was away and I wouldn't dream of doing such a thing. Just think of all the married people who were separated by war for years at a time. The ones who really loved one another did not have to be unfaithful.

I opened one of this woman's letters and learned that Johnny even called her by my pet name. He evidently told her we had a free, open relationship and didn't look on one another as "possessions." No wonder she feels free to share him with me.

Personally I think this woman is crazy, but that doesn't make things easier for me. I don't want to act like an injured wife, but how else can I act? The whole thing just makes me sick and I find I don't want any lovemaking.

The Council: We agree with Emily that loneliness is no excuse for infidelity. Countless devoted couples have been able to maintain their loyalty through far longer and more difficult separations.

We also agree with Emily that the "other woman" is on the crazy side. Some women don't stage her kind of campaign for somebody else's husband. Her aggressiveness goes way beyond the bounds of the ordinary female variety.

We would suggest that Emily try to take this last fact into consideration when she thinks about the problem. Most of us are thrown out of our normal behavior patterns when confronted with an unfamiliar situation. Women may have flirted with Jonathan before, but it is doubtful

Solo, Ensemble Contest Scheduled

The Southern Oregon Music Educators association will hold its annual school solo and ensemble contest in Medford tomorrow, Lynn Sjolund, Medford High school vocal instructor and chairman of the event, has announced.

Soloists and small instrumental and vocal ensembles will be judged on the basis of a musical standard and receive ratings of superior, excellent, good or fair.

Contest centers are Medford High school auditorium and the high school music building. Events will start at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow and will end about 4:30 p.m., Sjolund said.

Adjudicators for the event include Delbert Chinburg, Salem, woodwinds; Carl Gutmann, Hissburg, woodwinds; Ira Lee, University of Oregon, brass; Dr. William Swettman, Salem public schools; string and brass; and Virginia Elliott, Linfield college, voice and piano.

Contractors Select Massachusetts Man

San Francisco—UPI—John A. Volpe, commissioner of public works for Massachusetts, was installed Thursday as president of the Associated General Contractors of America, Inc.

The installation ceremonies were conducted before 2,000 delegates at the final session of the 41st annual convention. M. Clare Miller, McPherson, Kan., assumed office as the new vice president of the organization. Officers chosen to head occupational divisions included:

Highways—H. L. Royden, Phoenix, chairman.
Heavy—Carl M. Halvorsen, Portland, vice chairman.

Interference in Radio-TV Opposed

Washington—UPI—President Eisenhower's new nominee to the federal communications commission said today the government had no business "trying to determine what programs should be offered to the American public by radio and television."

The appointee, Edward K. Mills Jr., also said he considered unofficial contacts between FCC commissioners and broadcast officials "out of order."

Mills told United Press International in an interview that he hoped public demand would bring about an improvement in program standards.

He said he felt the public already had indicated it wanted "less emphasis on crime and violence," in radio-TV shows.

Mills, a New Jersey lawyer and until last December a deputy administrator of the General Services Administration, was nominated by Eisenhower Thursday to serve out the unexpired 15-month term of former FCC Chairman John C. Doerfer.

Doerfer resigned recently under fire from Congress for accepting plane flights and yacht cruises from broadcast executives. Mills must be confirmed by the Senate.

Reliability

Two very practical advantages of 1960 Cadillac ownership are minimal maintenance costs and exceptional resale worth. Both have been continuous Cadillac virtues for fifty-eight years, as revealed by the fact that almost half of all the cars ever built by Cadillac are operating today—and thirty thousand of these have been on the road for twenty years or more. This notable record of reliability added to the remarkable operating economy makes the Cadillac for 1960 the wisest of motoring investments.
