Bomarc Cutback Plan Opposed

Washington — (UPI) — The Air Force, which announced last week it is drastically curtailing the Bomarc B air defense missile program, has rejected congressional suggestions it abandon the Bomarc entirely.

Closed-door testimony published Tuesday by the House defense appropriations subcommittee showed Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, has "utmost confidence" in this anti-aircraft missile.

White also pointed to the fact that Canada, with which this country works in a joint defense effort, plans to go ahead with her Bomarc bases. And he said Gen. Lawrence S. Kuter, chief of the North American Defense Command, sharply opposed the planned cutback and could not provide a substitute defense in event the Bomarc were altogether eliminated.

Spring Highlight

The extreme of the twenties, when too great a part of the increase in productivity was channeled into profit, was no more unground than the perils of the sixties of funneling all of the gains of investment into wages.

Weissman finds some of the annual reports playing a bigger part in economic education. He praises the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for its discussion of the American economy, and the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia for its exposition on central banking.

He gives a nod of approval to Virginia Electric & Power company for its two-page insert on "The Price of Liberty."

Du Pont's report brought out that the average operating investment per employee now amounts to $32,000 against $17,600 in 1950 and less than $13,000 before World War II.

Maintenance Higher
Allis-Chalmers brings out that plant maintenance runs far higher than depreciation provisions. Borden's report includes earnings of foreign subsidiaries now becoming important for many companies.

Central Hudson Gas lists the percentage of employees owning stock — 22 per cent for that company.

General Electric notes its pension fund exceeds a billion dollars and in 1959 the cost of employee benefits was within one million dollars of the company's dividend payments.

Looking over the reports, Weissman concludes corporations this year will continue to finance expansion out of earnings and keep dividend payments around the same percentage of profits as 1959.

Lent Said to Help Christians Achieve Mastery Over Selves

By FR. AIDAN M. CARR
O. F. M. Conv.

Lent helps Christians to achieve a mastery over themselves; to reaffirm men's goal as a child of God and brother of Christ. In a world that is more concerned about what one has than about what one is; that hold out the false promise of happiness through pleasure—the church now invites all to remember that the state of one's own soul is what really matters and that true happiness not pleasure is the purpose of human life.

It is a mistake to regard Lenten restraints as somehow intended to rob life of exuberance, warmth, and vitality. Lent is no killjoy. It is a gentle if firm invitation to rise to spiritual heights through some slight imitation of Christ's splendid self-mastery. "Follow me," he whispers to every man, "I am the way, the truth, the life." And in calling us to be like him in honoring the father, he reminds us that self-conquest through mortification is necessary if we are God's will and not merely our own.

Penance brings to all who sincerely accept it a precious chance to reflect, once again, that if we want one way to share Christ's glory, we must now share his cross.

BABY ABANDONED—Found in the vestibule of St. Vincent DePaul Church in Pittsburgh, Pa., four-pound "Patty" was reported doing fine in Ohio Valley hospital today. The baby was found by Mrs. Mary Masilunas, mother of three, who recognized what others thought the meowing of a kitten as a baby's cry. A nurse is holding the baby, named by nurses for the policeman who brought her to the hospital. —(UPI Telephoto)

Corporations' Reports Making Americans Informed Investors

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York — (UPI) — Annual reports of corporations are becoming bigger and better to make Americans the best informed investors in the world, a Wall Street economist finds after a concentrated study of these documents.

But R. L. Weissman, economist of W. E. Hutton & Co., finds there still is lacking an educational program in defense of capitalism and profits — a program that could be helped along by informative articles in the annual reports.

"The annual report," he says, "should be an important instrument in molding public opinion merely by a plain statement of facts."

He quotes the late professor Joseph A. Schumpeter of Harvard who harbored a deep fear that innovation and capitalism were in danger because of the unwillingness of the industrial leaders to oppose encroachment, and their half apologetic defense of capitalism and profits.

Inadequate Answers
Intellectuals who are prone to criticize what they do not understand, are not meeting adequate answers to their abusive accusations, says Weissman.

"The simple test," he suggests, "is to try and convince professional men such as doctors, editors, students, housewives, or the mass of employees that in manufacturing of all kinds, net profits have been running at a rate of four to five cents on each dollar's sales."

"If all profits were removed, the buyers would be enriched by five cents out of a dollar's outlay." He finds socialization of profits already has proceeded quite far, with taxes on profits even beyond those visualized at the height of new deal experimentation.

"In an election year particularly," Weissman says, "the need for economic education is great and the urgency of a strong, straight-forward insistence on the virtue and desirability of profits can hardly be over-emphasized.

"One gets the impression in listening to talk that profits are almost immoral to many. 'Higher wages, it seems, are to be welcomed — higher profits are to be decried. No Profit, No Investment'

"Intellectuals seem to forget that neither they nor anyone else would make added investments without an added return.

"The extreme of the twenties, when too great a part of the increase in productivity was channeled into profit, was no more unground than the perils of the sixties of funneling all of the gains of investment into wages."
