Three-Story House Which Burned Was Built by Pioneers

The historic, huge, three-story house which burned on Colver rd. near Talent on Wednesday night was erected by Eli K. Anderson, who settled in the Rogue River valley in 1852.

There are some questions as to the exact date that the pioneer home, a Southern Oregon landmark, was built. A picture of the house, on display at the Jacksonville museum, indicates an 1880 construction date for the 14-room residence.

Records at the museum tell of Anderson and his brother, J. Firman Anderson, locating on adjacent donation land claims near the present site of Talent in 1852. Their log cabin was erected on the line between the two properties in order that each might live on his own land.

After Eli Anderson married Elizabeth Myers in 1856 he built a more pretentious house and it became a center of pioneer hospitality. Museum files say that this home was succeeded by the present one. Drawn to California.

Anderson, born near Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 20, 1826, was drawn to California by the Gold Rush in 1849. After coming to this valley he went to the Willamette valley for seed and grain and in the fall of 1852 plowed a small patch of ground and planted wheat and oats. The next year he planted 12 acres of wheat. This crop was sold for $8 per bushel.

Then, Anderson and his brother brought the flour mill at Ashland, the first erected in southern Oregon. They paid $5 per bushel and sold the flour for 15 cents per pound.

Eli Anderson also engaged in the mercantile business at Ashland, had woolen mill interests and owned the Forty-Inch, Davenport and Fairview Mines. He was a pioneer in irrigation and built the first ditch from Ashland creek three miles above the city Ashland. He served on the board of county commissioners.

Anderson moved from the house near Talent to Ashland in 1909. He died on March 13, 1912.

A daughter, A. Belle Anderson, Ashland, survives.

Diabetes Subject Of Television Panel

Diabetes will be discussed on "Adventures in Medicine" at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon over KBES-TV. The series of bi-weekly programs on health is sponsored by the Jackson County Tuberculosis and Health association and produced in cooperation with the Jackson County Medical Society.

Diabetes is sometimes referred to as the "great imitator" because the symptoms may appear anywhere in the body and may mimic other diseases. It is estimated that there are more than 1 million known cases in the country, and at least another million who do not know they have it, the association said.

Appearing on the medical panel will be Dr. Ralph E. Hibbs, Medford, and Dr. John R. Reynolds, Ashland, specialists in diagnosis and internal medicine, and Dr. Malcolm Byers, Medford, general practitioner.
