Political Parties, New Booklet Discussed at Roundtable

The United States has gone in reverse in the organization of its political party system, because there are now four influential political parties whereas there were, until a few years ago, only two. Two of these parties are congressional, competing to see which one can control Congress and the other two are political, battling for control of the White House and U.S. policies.

These remarks were made Monday by Mrs. Thomas Rutter, voter service chairman of the Medford League of Women Voters, who addressed the Medford Chamber of Commerce Roundtable luncheon on the coming elections, county, state and federal.

Mrs. Rutter implied that the existing two-party system is two-party in name only, each having its conservative and liberal blocs.

"When we cast our vote in national elections, we are casting our vote to see which kind of liberals will sit in Congress and which kind of conservatives will run the White House," she stated. She said there is a lack of emphasis on political parties today and there is no longer any political party organization for "power." The only organization in today's parties, she said, revolves around office holders and seekers and their following.

The reasons for the de-emphasis on political parties is due in part, she said, to the consolidation of labor, mechanized farms, centralized business, the population explosion and mass media, all of which have contributed to a kind of a "national togetherness."

Mrs. Rutter also pointed out that interest in county elections is much less than interest in state and national elections. This is partly due, she said, to the fact that the state and national candidates are able to publicize themselves to a greater extent than local candidates can.

Yet, as was pointed out by Mrs. John E. Ousterhout, chairman of the know your county committee of the League who also addressed the Chamber luncheon on a booklet entitled "How Much Do You Know About Jackson County?" recently compiled and written by the Medford League of Women Voters, the county government is probably the branch of government which is closest to the people because of such things as the payment of property taxes.

But, as Mrs. Rutter explained, the people, many voters who go to the polls, mark their state and federal ballots then leave without even voting for county officers simply because the publicized interest is less and they are not acquainted with the candidates.

It is a fact, she said, that the number of votes cast for candidates decreases as the importance of the office being sought decreases. She said it is lucky if one out of four persons voting, really know what they are voting about.

Mrs. Rutter also commented on ballot measures and the two which will be on the ballot for county residents in the May primary. She said that the size of the vote cast on measures is usually related to the length, type and brevity of the measure itself as it appears on the ballot.

One of the measures, the proposal to raise the pay of Oregon legislators from $600 per year to $1,200 a year, has the strong backing of the League, according to Mrs. Rutter. She pointed out that legislators in California receive $6,000 a year and those in Alaska $3,000.

The increase will make the total pay only $175 a month, she said, which will not be equal to what most legislators are making in private life.

One of the reasons for the necessity of higher salaries, she said, is that a person cannot afford to run for this office unless he is wealthy or subsidized by some particular group, which keeps many otherwise able persons from running for legislative offices in Oregon.

The average pay for a day in the Oregon legislature is now only $12, which is not enough to even meet the cost of living in Salem, or make up for the income lost to a legislator while the legislature is in session, or pay for travel expenses, or pay for hardship to the legislators' families, Mrs. Rutter pointed out.

Mrs. Ousterhout said the League started working on the county government pamphlet about three years ago when they found that there was almost no information available on county government.

She said that one phase of county government can't be understood without looking at the entire structure and when the League first started gathering information for the pamphlet the county structure looked complicated. However, after gathering information for two years they were able to come out with a "fairly coherent" description of various county government services.

She said the pamphlet, which was released for distribution 11 days ago, has had very good reception so far. The Medford school district has ordered 750 copies of the book for use in classrooms, she said, and Southern Oregon college will also order some.

The pamphlet, Mrs. Ousterhout said, contains a brief history and geography of the county, a description of county offices and information on elections and political parties. The longest article in the pamphlet she said, is devoted to O and C lands. The reason for this, Mrs. Ousterhout pointed out, is that many persons are not aware that the sale of O and C timber in this county makes it possible for county residents not to pay a county property tax.

Dr. Ken Baker, roundtable chairman, said the speaker at next Monday's roundtable will be Bert Parks, but he would elaborate no further.

First Meeting of KOG Group Set

The first meeting of the Jackson County Keep Oregon Green committee for 1960 will be held sometime in early May, according to Dale Prentice, secretary of the Keep Oregon Green association, which will be the guest speaker at the coming year's meeting. Part of the activity will include the presentation of the Keep Oregon Green story to the schools in Jackson county and the distribution of KOG posters.

Prentice noted that the disastrous Ashland fire, last season, pointed up the need for a vital program of public education to the necessity for prevention work in the battle to keep fire out of the forested areas.

Prentice noted that the opening of the fire season April 1 made it imperative that residents in Jackson county abide by the simple rules for fire safety to protect the forests in this area since they play such a vital role in the area's economy.

Man Cited After Hit-Run Accidents

Medford police issued two citations for failure to leave information at the scene of an accident Sunday to a Medford man who allegedly failed to stop after hitting two parked cars with the car he was operating.

A witness to one of the accidents obtained the license number of the hit and run vehicle leading police to the information that Emerson Etharge McClellan, 59, of 307 Ashland st., Medford, was the driver.

The first of the two accidents occurred at 4:25 p.m. on 12th st., between Central ave. and Front st., where a parked pickup truck registered to O.K. Rubber Welders, 1760 North Riverside ave., was struck and damaged. The other accident occurred five minutes later on Hawthorne st., between Main and Jackson sts., police said, where a parked vehicle, registered to Otto Gordon Hudson, 349 Windsor ave., sustained rear-end damage.

BEST IN BUSINESS—Actor Charlton Heston and Actress Simone Signoret "toasted" each other with their Oscars after the 32nd annual Academy Awards at Hollywood Monday night. Heston was voted best actor for 1959 for his performance in "Ben Hur" and Miss Signoret as best actress for her performance in "Room at the Top." (UPI Telephoto)

Charlton Heston, Simone Signoret Presented Oscars

Hollywood—Charlton Heston, rugged star of "Ben Hur," and France's Simone Signoret, the wayward wife in "Room at the Top," ruled as king and queen of the movies today—Oscar winners for the best actor and actress of 1959.

The stars shared the spotlight with "Ben-Hur" at Monday night's 32nd annual Academy Awards program when the $15 million spectacle won the best picture Oscar and 10 other awards, more than any film in history.

Shelley Winters, playing a dowdy housewife in "The Diary of Anne Frank," won the best supporting actress honor, and English star Hugh Griffith won best supporting actor for his role in "Ben-Hur."

Scores of stars crowded into the Pantages Theater on Hollywood Blvd. where their enthusiasm was somewhat dimmed by the Screen Actors Guild against the major movie studios.

Master of ceremonies Bob Hope joked about the strike, saying, "Welcome to Hollywood's most glamorous strike meeting."

Later in the show Hope was surprised himself when he was presented with the special Jean Hersholt Award for humanitarianism.

The winners were both excited and grateful in their acceptance speeches. Miss Signoret, a 39-year-old blonde, told the 2100 celebrities and fans in the theater, "I can't say anything. All I thank you. You can't imagine what it is for me, being French."

Before leaving his seat Heston hugged and kissed his wife. Then he marched stiffly to the state to say, "When you stand here you want to thank everybody you ever knew in this business. Ten years ago next month I made my first picture. Since then I worked with many of you and all of you did something to help me get here."

Breaks Award Record
Jubilant William Wyler, winner of two previous directing Oscars, said, "We broke the record," referring to "Ben-Hur" 11 awards in the 12 categories for which it was nominated. The MGM religious epic filmed on location in Rome, surpassed the previous record holder, "Gigi," which collected nine awards last year. MGM topped the studio totals with 11, all for "Ben-Hur." Next was 20th Century-Fox with three.

Miss Signoret became the first actress to win an Oscar in a British-made film, and has never made a movie in the United States. She came to this country for the first time last year.

Miss Winters broke into tears backstage, crying, "I got it, at last, at last. I would like to thank the memory of the wonderful little girl (Anne Frank) who wrote with such depth and perception about human beings."
