The Medical Roundup

Tranquilizers

Many people ask about tranquilizers: Are they safe to take? What will they do? etc. The main difference between a sedative, such as a bromide or phenobarbital, and a good tranquilizer is that the sedative quickly produces an unpleasant jaundice, and another can sometimes produce a depression so bad that the person has to be hospitalized.

When starting to use any one of the hundreds of new drugs that have been synthesized in chemical laboratories, the person should use the smallest effective dose. Also, he must keep watching for any symptoms that might indicate the coming of dangerous "side-effects." Then he should quickly stop the use of the drug and discuss the problem with his physician.

One of the worst features about the use of quieting drugs, such as barbiturates, tranquilizers and alcohol is that many of the people who feel a great desire to be calmed down and made forgetful—perhaps of the mess they have made of their life—is that they have so little self-control and so little sense that they will take the pills, a half-dozen at a time, plus perhaps whiskey, a pint at a time.

Traffic Laws Protect Driver

"If every driver would realize that traffic laws are on his side, he wouldn't think of disregarding them," Chief of Police Charles P. Champlin commented today.

"When you drive faster than the designated speed, make wrong turns, run red lights or stop signs or pass improperly you run big risks," he said.

These risks can result in traffic fines, costly car repairs, towing costs, medical bills, lost wages, damage suits, lawyer's fees and loss of your driver's license. Add to these the suffering even a minor accident can cause, he said, and you have a real case for knowing and obeying traffic laws.

"Unfortunately, some otherwise law abiding citizens treat traffic laws casually and even ignore them when it becomes inconvenient to comply," Champlin said.

"Traffic laws are on your side, and so are the men who enforce these laws," he concluded, "but they can't help you if you ignore them."

Hepatitis Cases Hit Peak Week in United States

Washington—(Science Service)—The liver damaging disease known as hepatitis is on the rise in this country, latest U. S. Public Health Service data reveal.

The latest figure of 851 cases, for the week ending March 19, includes both serum and infectious forms of this disease. The highest recorded number of cases for a 12-month period was 50,000 in 1954. There was a slow decline each year thereafter until 1958 when the number of cases began to rise again. The peak of this "cycle" of the disease will probably occur in 1961, Dr. C. C. Dauer, medical adviser to the National Office of Vital Statistics, explained. To date there have been 8,180 reported cases this year compared to 6,195 for the same length of time last year. The disease usually reaches its peak in March, after which it is expected to dip for the summer months.

Since records of the incidence of the disease have been kept only since 1950, the exact cycle of hepatitis has not been determined.

Both forms of the disease are caused by viruses in the bloodstream. Symptoms include fever, skin rash, fatigue, headache, nausea, chills, diarrhea and itching. The liver can also be severely damaged.
