

EP Launches Tree-Planting Program to Beautify City

By DOTTIE HARBISON
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Eagle Point—Three redwood trees were planted last Thursday to start off the tree planting program being planned and carried out within the city limits of Eagle Point.

Chairman Dave Hannaford planted two of the trees in the present city park and one on the site of the new Scout Community Center building. These trees were presented to the city by C. C. Hoover, service project chairman for the Eagle Point Grange.

Hannaford stated that 11 globe headed European ash trees have been ordered for planting along West Main st. and are being donated by the businessmen who will help care for them.

Full-Scale Plan
The Garden club is being approached to lay out a full-scale plan for the entire city to follow in hopes of having each street planted with a different type of tree to form a pattern and enable Eagle Point to retain its natural beauty along with its pioneer cow-town atmosphere while developing into a larger city.

North Carolina poplar trees were purchased and planted by Mrs. William (Mattie) Brown in about 1919 and watered for several years all along West Main st., the city park and East Main st. These trees were responsible for the printed descriptions of Eagle Point as a small outstanding town of beauty built along one of those beautiful streams that artists have tried to capture in their paintings and surrounded by a mountainous background.

A few years back, when Eagle Point started its growth and development, streets were necessary so the trees were removed to prevent damage to the pavement by the roots. Mrs. Brown stated that people still take refuge under the two big poplar trees still remaining next to their old store on North C st. during hot summer months.

Some Trees Dying
The Jackson county horticulturist has advised that no more trees should be planted in the city park until some of the dying trees could be removed due to the overcrowded root system now prevailing.

He plans to go over the plans submitted by the garden club and a landscape architect also will help evaluate the plans before action is taken next year. Because of the late season for planting, nothing more will be planted until next year, following the planting of the 11 ash trees this year.

Laying out a plan for the city's trees will fit in with the community service project the Grange has laid out from Villas rd. to the timberline for aerial view tree planting.

Redwood De Molay Sets Meet, Dance

Illinois Valley—The Redwood chapter of the Order of De Molay will host other chapters from throughout the district at a business meeting and dance in Kerby this Saturday. Groups from Medford, Grants Pass, Ashland and Central Point will participate.

The business meeting in the Masonic hall will begin at 2 p.m. and officers will be elected starting at 4:30. All chapters will enter candidates in the Sweetheart dance and contest which begins at 8 p.m. in the Kerby school auditorium.

Local candidate is Miss Arlene Gibbons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gibbons. Music will be provided by Van Johnson's band.

Illinois Valley—Burning permits, required since April 1, can be obtained at the state forest patrol office on Redwood highway, according to Fire Warden John Moe.

Handy Fillers
When reading a newspaper, this one or any other, you've undoubtedly come across those one-paragraph bits of miscellaneous information known as "fillers."

You'll usually find them where you'd least expect. Say you're reading a story about the situation in India. Suddenly there's a short dash and a paragraph saying "An average farm in Nebraska has about 1,000 acres."

They're called fillers for good reason. Some are local news items and some are just miscellany the printers keep in stock to fill small spaces when a story isn't quite long enough.

They may seem incongruous (which they usually are) to most readers, but, if used properly, they can come in handy during conversations on just about any subject. Try memorizing a few and then dropping them nonchalantly the next time you're at a party.

Since this is an election year, the talk at many gatherings will center around politics. After the various good and not-so-good points about Nixon, Kennedy, Humphrey, et al. have been exhausted there may be a lull in the chatter. But you keep the conversation ball rolling by saying:

"Dwight Eisenhower is one of seven brothers."

Or maybe you and your spouse are out to dinner with another couple and no one can decide what to order. Again you leap to the rescue with:

"Tripe and onions are exotic with the addition of sour cream and sliced almonds."

Suppose some friends are showing you around the new home they've just purchased. They guide you through the living and dining rooms and then proudly point to the modernistic tile in their new bathroom.

Are you stuck for a comment? Nope, you just glance around knowledgeably and say:

"About 95 per cent of the world's bathtubs are in the United States."

Perhaps you run in to a friend with a new baby. Naturally, he or she will bombard you with photographs of the tyke. You could use the standard lines such as "Gee, isn't he cute?" or "He certainly looks like his father," but for a real clincher, try this:

"A flash bulb for underwater photography has a flash so brief that it will not startle fish."

Maybe someone calls you on the phone. Just as both of you run out of things to say, you amaze your listener with this line:

"Marconi sent a wireless message across the Atlantic in 1901."

Say you're at your bank, writing a check. Suddenly the bank's pen refuses to write. The teller flushes with embarrassment but you brighten his day with this comment:

"The fountain pen was invented in about 1884."

Of course we all have at least one acquaintance who constantly complains of some illness or other. After listening to a detailed description of his latest physical troubles, you say:

"About 400,000 persons are ill of pneumonia in the U.S. each year."

All this, we hope, has gone to prove that there's some useful purpose for everything that appears in your daily newspaper. It's just a matter of making the most of the information which is placed at your fingertips.

If there's still some doubt in your minds, we leave you with these words of wisdom: "Try an egg poacher to heat the baby's food."

ARTIST'S DRAWING OF EAGLE POINT SCOUT COMMUNITY BUILDING
Concrete Footings are Poured; Construction Will Begin Saturday

Work Begins on EP's Community Building

Eagle Point—Concrete footings for the Eagle Point Scout Community building were poured last week and approximately 1,000 expanded shale blocks have been purchased for the basement walls. According to General Chairman Harry Hanscom, actual construction work will start this Saturday.

Anyone who can help at that time is asked to meet at the building site at the north end of North B st. at 1 p.m. Because of a legal technicality, the building site had to be changed with a location nearer the park entrance, and it was felt that a modification of the original plans were more beneficial in the addition of a half basement 26 by 30 feet.

Work on the park area itself has been started with leveling, cleaning up and brush burning, according to Chairman Donald Kimmel. He stated they were ready for volunteer help at this time and that the crews would be working on Saturdays and Sundays during the afternoons as often as possible.

Hanscom said the building committee would also be working Saturday and Sunday afternoons providing they had enough money and necessary materials. The general fund solicitation drive will be resumed again shortly, in hopes of collecting part of these funds. Anyone who wishes to help either financially or with material or labor is asked to contact Hanscom at HI 6-3852.

Hanscom met with part of the committee Saturday night to discuss plans for laying out work details and to report on work already completed. He stated that due to the misplacement or loss of his committee records, he was unable to reach everyone who should have been notified for this meeting. He asked that organizations and anyone else interested to contact him immediately and give him their names and telephone numbers so he can compile a new record.

The main purpose of the building is for the youth organization, but it will be available for other organizations and uses when not being used by the younger set. Plans and fund raising projects were started last year and stopped until all legal difficulties had been ironed out.

200 Persons Attend PTA Open House at Prospect

By FRANCES RING
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Prospect—The Prospect PTA entertained a record crowd of more than 200 persons at its annual open house meeting last Tuesday.

The business meeting featured election of new officers. Elected were Mrs. Pat Goodman, president; Mrs. Mickey Peterson, vice president; Mrs. Alta Goode, secretary, and Mrs. Betty Payne, treasurer.

The new president, vice president and treasurer, it was announced, will attend the PTA convention in Medford April 26-28. The secretary will attend if one of the other officers is unable to do so.

Other highlights of the open house were a program of five selections by the high school chorus and a style show staged by home economics students. The girls modeled garments they had made during the past six weeks. Larry Drake directed the chorus and the style show was directed by Mrs. Charlotte Smith.

Guests saw a biology exhibit and chemistry students demonstrated experiments which they had learned recently. Peter Nashed displayed wood working projects which his class had completed.

Library Slates Open House Tea

Jacksonville—According to Mrs. Helen Roberts, Jacksonville librarian, library open house tea will be held this Friday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. in observance of National Library Week.

Miss Claire Hanley is chairman of National Library Week and Jacksonville committee members are Mrs. C. L. McBeth, Mrs. E. O. Graham and Mrs. Hueston Valentine. The public is invited to the open house and the librarian has urged especially that new residents here attend.

The Jacksonville library, established in 1921, is the oldest branch library in Jackson county and now occupies the historic Brunner Bros. building where women and children sought safety during frequent Indian raids in the Jacksonville area. The library at its present location was reopened June 1, 1956 after being moved from the old U. S. Hotel where it had been for many years.
