

Crater Club Announces Winners in Recent Show

Central Point—Mrs. Clifford Green of Crater Garden club and Mrs. C. W. Anhorn of Central Point Garden club won the largest number of blue ribbons in the recent second annual flower show of Crater Garden club, held in Crater High school cafeteria. "Wayward Spring" was the show theme.

Mrs. Green won the most blue ribbons in the horticulture division, and Mrs. Anhorn the largest number in the arrangement classes.

Judges for the show were Mrs. E. A. Bay, Ashland, Mrs. Charles C. Stearns, Medford and Mrs. William Sheppard, Shady Cove.

Pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. R. T. Nichol, Medford, chairman of the Siskiyou district, Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs; Mrs. Ira D. Fitzgerald, past president of the district; Mrs. C. C. Hoover of Roxy Gardeners; Mrs. L. Crocker, Howard Garden club; Mrs. Everett Young, president of the Central Point club and Mrs. Anhorn.

One of the features of the show was a display of the many types of garden and flower books on the market. The stage represented a burned area of a forest as contrasted to one still green and growing.

In the arrangement classes was one of "split level" using twin containers, which won a prize for Mrs. John T. Holmer, Central Point, Mrs. Lawrence Messal of Crater club displayed from her greenhouse and also made an arrangement of yellow and white chrysanthemums for a wedding table display.

Women's News Social Events

The telephone can be the most useful and at the same time the most exasperating device. Bearer of both good and bad news, it was the latter which set the wires working Tuesday for Potpourri and her family. As the calls flew thick and fast between several cities, we began to wonder about this business of a subscriber being able to dial directly to points both near and far, without having to bother to place them through an operator.

The new system is already in use in some parts of the United States, it is said.

At one time Tuesday we endeavored to place a call, through a long distance operator, for Blue River, Ore., which has a "Valley" prefix. The first attempt ended up in Blue River, Calif. On the second try, using the VA prefix, the call went to Arcata, Calif. The operator apologized and said it was because of the conflicting "VA" prefixes, the Arcata prefix being "Van Dyke".

Later in the day another call was placed from a booth located just outside the door of the telephone company office in a town north of Medford. We told the operator the number in Washington we wanted (this one had no prefix) and she asked for the number of the booth phone, which we repeated. "What is the prefix, please" came the question, and when we looked, there wasn't any. The operator insisted that we look again.

"It must be Union," she said in a resigned voice. A few seconds passed and the voice said "That will be $1.20 plus." Not thinking what "plus" might mean, we dropped in four quarters and two dimes and then the voice said "another dime please." The last few hours had been trying and filled with emotional strain, so the female in the booth snapped at the female on the other end of the connection and inquired "Why didn't you say so in the beginning?"

"But I did madam," came the patient sounding reply. "I told you $1.20 cent plus tax." Perhaps we're a bit stupid, but are the customers figuring the tax, as well as paying it, while standing in a telephone booth?

The conversation completed, the traveler popped into the company office to thank the woman at the desk who had supplied change. Thinking to be helpful, we told her that the booth phone had no prefix on its number and that we had wasted a few seconds convincing the long-distance operator that it wasn't there. "What's the matter with her?" said the secretary. "She knows perfectly well what the prefix on that phone booth number is."

And so ended lesson No. 2 for the day in long-distance telephoning.

We returned to the car and reported to our spouse, sputtering about big business in America and whether it's as efficient as it might be. "Simmer down" said Pappy, whose nerves don't fray as easily as ours. "Just remember the long distance telephone is a lot better than smoke signals were."

Come to think of it, the customers in this country are required to figure the tax and pay it, too, as far as state and federal income taxes are required. Several days ago Pappy, who fills out the tax forms in our household, wanted to know the whereabouts of the Oregon tax form. Neither of us could remember having seen it, although we try to be careful about important mail.

Appealing to the Countess, she rummaged in a desk drawer and came up with one. She also had an explanation for the fact that the first had been lost. "You probably threw it away thinking it was an advertisement," she said. "This year, for some strange reason, the forms were addressed 'Boxholder.'"

The Countess, whose efficiency no one doubts, took a dim view of this. "They should be addressed to the person expected to pay the tax," she said firmly. "If I'm going to pay out all that money to the state, the least the tax commission can do is to see that I'm addressed 'My Dear Miss Lindsey.'"—O.S.

Tea and Style Show Planned In Eagle Point For Friday

Eagle Point - The third annual tasting tea and style show will be sponsored by Eagle Point Jayceettes Friday, April 8, at the Eagle Point Grange hall, corner of South B and East Main streets.

Easter has been selected for the theme this year, and the style show will feature Easter fashions and other new spring styles.

The tea will start at 1:30 p.m. and recipes for the cookies being served will be available. The style show is divided into two parts, with the first show starting at 2 p.m. Mrs. Vincent Vaughn and Mrs. Ed Chamberlain of the Eagle Point Town and Country shop are in charge of the show. Dresses for all figure sizes and ages will be shown, it is stated.

An award will be presented to the youngest grandmother present at 2:45 p.m. Mrs. Chamberlain, winner of the Mother of the Year award last year will present this award. Entertainment will follow the presentation at 3 p.m. John Lusk will play the organ throughout the afternoon.

The second half of the style show will be from 3:15 to 3:45 p.m. and will be followed by presentation of a prize.

Free child care will be provided for pre-school youngsters downstairs in the grange hall by the Camp Fire Girls and their leader, Mrs. Keith Krambeal.

Mrs. Ralph Humphries, chairman of the tea, invites everyone to come out and see the new fashions for spring and Easter. Card tables have been placed about the hall; guests may come either as a party or individually, see the show and enjoy tea at the same time.

Jefferson PTA To Hear Speaker

Elliott Becken, assistant superintendent of Medford public schools, will speak for a meeting of Jefferson Parent-Teacher association Friday, April 8, at 2:30 p.m. The nominating committee will report.

Mr. Becken will talk about the school budget.

A musical interlude will be provided by a group of Medford High school students under the direction of Lynn Sjolund. Selections will be from the musical "Oklahoma" which will be given at the school in the near future.

Mrs. John Ely will discuss the needs and uses of the library in observance of National Library week.

Nursery care will be provided for pre-school age children.

Refreshments will be served; all interested persons are invited to attend.
