

South Korean Mobs in Wild Demonstrations

UNREST IN KOREA—Shouting and banner-carrying Koreans, part of a crowd of some 5,000, swarm through downtown Seoul during a protest march against recent presidential elections. An estimated 20,000 persons shouting anti-government slogans demonstrated in Masan, Korea, in the city's second straight day of violent protest against alleged fraud in the elections. Police Fire on Crowds Attacking Public Buildings

Masan, Korea—(UPI)—Masan provincial police appealed today for additional reinforcements to cope with anti-government demonstrators in this South Korean port, for two days the scene of rioting that spread death and destruction through the center of the city. Three persons were killed Monday night when police fired into a mob attacking their headquarters and a score of others—including several policemen—were wounded. There were no reports of casualties today but new demonstrations were held in the city.

Local police authorities extended the curfew today from five to 10 hours. At the same time, they asked that another 1,000 policemen be sent here. More than 400 already had arrived from nearby Pusan. Buildings Damaged City hall, all of the city's police station, and other official or semi-official buildings were destroyed or damaged by the rioters.

In Taegu, a mob of more than 100 members of the opposition Democratic party stoned police who halted an attempted demonstration against the government and the disputed March 15 elections. About 30 of the would-be demonstrators were arrested.

Slogans Shouted—An estimated 20,000 persons—most of them believed to be members of the opposition party—swarmed through the streets of Masan, shouting anti-government slogans. The Democrats have been loud in their criticism of the elections last month which returned President Syngman Rhee to office unopposed and swept his running mate, Lee Ki Poong, to victory over Democratic Vice President John M. Chang in a separate election.

U.S. Planning Space Vehicle With Nuclear-Powered Rocket

Washington—(UPI)—Missile expert Werner Von Braun has disclosed the United States is planning an advanced version of the Saturn space vehicle with a nuclear-powered upper stage rocket. The Atomic Energy Commission has allocated approximately $34,000,000 during fiscal 1961 on the Project Rover, name of the development program for the nuclear project. NASA has budgeted $5,500,000. NASA plans $134,308,000 for the basic Saturn booster in the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Published today by a House appropriations subcommittee, predicted the 1.5 million pound super booster—topped with a nuclear engine—would be flight tested in 1968 or 1969.

He said the multi-stage rocket, first to envisage a marriage between conventional and nuclear fuels in launching space packages, would be capable of placing a 72,000-pound instrument package in a 300-mile high orbit around the earth.

The German-born scientist said the rocket also would be capable of taking a 14,800-pound payload to a "soft" landing on the moon. Furthermore, he said, the nuclear-liquid fuel combination "makes it definitely possible to fly a portion of this back to the earth so you can bring samples back from the surface of the moon."

The Von Braun team, which has developed the eight-engine super booster at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency in Huntsville, Ala., will soon be transferred to the control of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. NASA's 10-year plan, presented to Congress in January, did not include any mention of the nuclear powered upper stage with the Saturn. South Africa Shows No Signs of Yielding to Racial Pressure

Johannesburg, South Africa—(UPI)—The South African government gave no sign today of yielding to internal and worldwide pressure for easing of its racial discrimination policies. Despite pleas for a reappraisal of the white supremacy laws, the government gave every indication it would carry on the line of Prime Minister Hendrik V. Verwoerd while he is recuperating in a hospital from an assassin's bullets. South African businessmen, clergymen, native leaders and some newspapers have called for the white government to take a new look at the way it treats the black man.

Barrage of Criticism—From abroad there has been a barrage of criticism from politicians, newspapers, organizations and even some governments, even within the British Commonwealth of which South Africa is a member. But South African police, continuing the government crackdown on native unrest, raided the native township of Rand Monday, confiscating weapons and arresting scores of blacks.

Police and court officials clamped a lid of secrecy on the case of wealthy farmer David Pratt, 52, arrested in connection with the shooting of Verwoerd. He had been expected to be arraigned in court Monday but did not appear, and later detectives were seen making a survey of the scene at the fair grounds where the shooting occurred.

Second Reporter Arrested—Authorities also moved against a second news correspondent, Mrs. Myrna MacKenzie, who writes for the London Daily Herald and New York Post under the name of Myrna Blumberg. She was taken into custody, presumably for dispatches she sent to the papers, shortly before it was announced that Norman Phillips, of the Toronto Star, would be released from custody on condition he leave the country.

Minister of External Affairs Eric H. Louw said postal authorities at Durban had been disturbed by Phillips' cables and that the Justice Ministry ordered him "detained for questioning."

Woman Killed in East Oregon Crash—Pendleton—(UPI)—Mrs. Margaret Nelson, Dayton, Idaho, was killed Monday afternoon in a two-car accident about 20 miles east of here on Highway 30. Mrs. Nelson, described as in her 60s by state police, was thrown through the windshield of the car her husband was driving. The husband also was thrown through the windshield and was in critical condition at a hospital here. He suffered internal injuries and a head injury. Police said the driver of the other car, Claude Milligan, Boise, and his passenger escaped injury.

Teen-Aged Gunman Holds 10-Year-Old Girl as Hostage

Pulaski, Va.—(UPI)—A teen-aged mill hand who barricaded himself in a house with his 10-year-old sister-in-law as a hostage vowed today to "kill me a couple of cops" before surrendering. Jack Jennings, 18, a skinny hero-worshiper of slain outlaw "Baby Face" Nelson, fired a shotgun blast at two officers who demanded that he give himself up to police surrounding the modest brick home of his father-in-law.

Earlier, Jennings took food offered by neighbors, posed for photographers and talked freely to reporters. He warned away policemen and fired one blast from his shotgun at a police cruiser, grazing it slightly. "I don't like going to court," he said. "I didn't like losing my job. I didn't like the thought of going to jail."

Siege Started Monday—Then he fired a second volley of three shotgun blasts from the house. The girl could be heard pleading for someone to come talk to Jennings. Jennings began his siege late Monday when he broke away from police leading him from a courtroom where he had been bound over to a Grand Jury on charges he stole his father-in-law's car. Jennings demanded that police send him his estranged wife, Sandra, 17, a high school student. But she covered in a nearby house, refusing to go. Fear for Hostage—Grin officers, armed with rifles and shotguns, crouched behind neighboring houses as the sun came over the mountains surrounding this normally peaceful southwest Virginia town of 12,000. They were afraid to move in because of the hostage. Jennings told a United Press International staffer in Richmond, Va., over the telephone, "I figure I'll kill me a couple of cops."
