

The week end mail included a note from the Tribune's Hornbrook correspondent, Katherine Chapman, who had a story to add to last Thursday's recital about long-distance telephone calls. Mrs. Chapman said not long ago her phone rang and a man's voice asked, "Is Mr. Piper there?" Mrs. C. replied that no one by that name lived at her house, and asked what number had the caller wanted. He gave a number with a Grover prefix, and said he was calling from Nassau county, New York. He was trying to reach someone in the next town.

When Mr. Nassau County found out that somehow his call had ended up hundreds of miles away in Hornbrook, northern California, he sputtered and steamed and exclaimed "This is utterly ridiculous." To which Mrs. Hornbrook readily agreed.

Mrs. Chapman ended her note by saying that this made the third such call in recent weeks, the first two having been from Fresno, Calif. One was a man trying to reach a feed store, and the other was calling his lawyer.

"Is Pappy sure that this is better than smoke signals?" asked Mrs. Chapman, plaintively.

Mrs. Owen Kunkel came by the desk not long ago with some PTA convention information, and also a bit of news about her brother, Ibsen Nelsen. Mr. Nelsen, a Seattle architect, was recently the subject of an article in the magazine, Better Homes and Gardens, which described a home the former Medford man had designed for a Seattle family. The architect, a graduate of Medford High school, later studied at the University of Oregon.

One of his latest assignments was designing the new Boy Scout headquarters in Seattle.

We've never met Mr. Nelsen, but we aren't likely to forget his name. Years ago, we wrote a story about him - the story of his marriage. The name was strange to us, and somehow, it got turned around in the story. As reported by the Tribune, Nelsen Ibsen had married.

Come to think of it, right this minute we aren't sure whether the Ibsen comes before or after the Nelsen.

Potpourri's friends and relatives are really very helpful. Especially when it comes to giving advice about Doll T, the little sports car.

From Spokane came a letter from daughter which said "I think to complete the effect of Doll T, you should have a standard poodle, white, or a Russian wolfhound, to sit in the car and look down his nose at the peasants. Or a sedate welshmaner, if there is such a thing. I don't think Raus (her dog) will ever be anything remotely resembling sedate. Perhaps a great Dane would achieve the desired effect."

It is perfectly evident from this that daughter has the wrong impression of Doll. She's not the poodle, or wolfhound, or Dane type at all. More like a fox terrier, maybe.

Photographer Bob Vroman is very helpful with his advice, too. Hearing that Potpourri had been forced to give up hauling so much cargo back and forth between home and the office, he said "Why don't you make some saddle bags and sling over the bonnet?"

Regional Editor Bob Walters announced Monday that he finally had named his little sports car. R. E. Walters, after discarding Ralph, Hugo, Gus, Tricky Dick, Sam, Willard, Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, Carmen, Fritz and Mae West, at length hit just the right name: "Remember B.R." You see, the regional editor was out wheeling around last Sunday afternoon, was stopped and presented with one of those greasy-green forms signed by Traffic Officer Robert Allen. So now, it's Remember B.R. He hopes the constant reminder will help to make his right foot lighter on the throttle.—O.S.

East to West Migration Continuing For Germans

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

Berlin—UPI—They cross the border between the East and West here at the rate of 270 to 300 a day.

Last year, 91,000 of them left behind their homes, their farms, their heir household goods, virtually everything they owned except the clothes they wore to start new lives in the western world.

Seldom does one whole family migrate together. They come piecemeal into this city from the Soviet, or east zone, of Germany. Some are seeking freedom to do and say what they please. Some are political refugees. Some come because of better job opportunities. Some come because Communist land reforms have turned their farms into co-operatives.

They are farmers, factory workers, clerks, teachers, doctors, lawyers.

Women Outnumber Men
More women than men enter through this "gateway to the west" because since World War II women have greatly outnumbered men in Germany, said Karl J. Germer, minister for the refugee program in West Berlin.

Germer said approximately 65 per cent of the refugees settle in the western part of the city. Others are flown to West Germany, which needs the manpower, but many ultimately establish new homes in Canada, Australia or the United States.

Entry is fairly easy, he said.

Once a person is cleared for travel from East Germany into the Soviet sector of Berlin.

Dr. Hollenbeck Speaks to Club About Science

"What's New in Science" was the topic of the speech given by Dr. Irene Hollenbeck, associate professor of science at Southern Oregon college, at a luncheon meeting of the College Women's Club of the Rogue River Valley. The meeting was held at the college Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Hollenbeck spoke of three phases of science, weather, radiation and nuclear science. Each is still being explored, she said.

Predicting weather in advance is based on history of the last 60 years, Miss Hollenbeck said. Being able to calculate weather in advance made it possible for the date set for the winter Olympics, the speaker said.

Scientists are trying to determine the harmful effects of radiation and there is unlimited exploration to be done in nuclear science, she added.

Dr. Hollenbeck has been selected as one of a team of science teachers to tour Western Europe this summer under the auspices of the National Science Teachers association.

Mrs. Frank Davis introduced Mrs. Jay Kaylor who sang three numbers. She was accompanied by Mrs. J. W. McCoy.

Easter Ham Should Rest Before Going to Table

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press International
New York — UPI — Like the cook who prepares it, an Easter ham benefits from half an hour's relaxation before dinner.

A rest period after roasting is especially important if you want to serve neat-looking leftovers, says Jeanne Lesem, home economist Margaret Spader. Meats carved as soon as it leaves the oven is liable to yield irregular slices and scraggly chunks, she said. However, it will slice neat and clean without cooling if left in a 140-degree warming oven or a warm spot in the kitchen for 20 to 30 minutes after cooking.

Whether you plan to refrigerate or freeze leftover ham, it should be cut into individual servings before storage. Carefully wrapped cooked ham can be held up to three weeks in a refrigerator freezing compartment, she said.

Miss Spader, home service consultant for the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association, suggests that as many uniformly large slices as possible be placed together in airtight wrapping. These slices make an appealing luncheon dish wrapped around asparagus, broccoli, or whole green beans. The hambone can go into split pea soup.

Small slices and chunks have many uses, including the following:
Ham shortcake, made by adding 1 cup of cubed cooked ham to 1½ cups of bechamel sauce (white sauce made with milk and veal stock), along with butter mushrooms, pimientos, chives and parsley. Serve over cornbread.
Half a cup of finely chopped cooked ham will perk up your favorite corn pudding recipe.

Prepare eggs for young by adding 1 tablespoon of soy sauce, 2 minced scallions and ½ cup each of finely minced cooked ham and mixed vegetables or mushroom pieces to 4 slightly beaten eggs. Fry quickly in pancake-sized omelets over high heat. Serve with a brown sauce and rice.

Finely ground ham may be used in jellied ham mousse, as a sandwich filling, with cream cheese and sour cream in a dip, in croquettes and deviled eggs and in stuffings for chicken, turkey or cabbage leaves.

Thin strips of ham make a tasty garnish for creamed cabbage, spinach or green beans, or a topping for chef's salad.
Squash souffle uses 1 cup each of finely chopped cooked ham and mashed squash or sweet potatoes. Add 2 egg yolks, fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites and bake in a 325-degree oven 30 minutes.
Ham jambalaya calls for ½ cup of diced cooked ham, 1 cup each of chicken, shrimp and cooked rice, and 2 cups of canned tomatoes. Season with onion, green pepper and bake about 1 hour at 350 degrees.

Ham biscuits, using ½ cup of ground ham for each 2 cups of biscuit mix, serve as appetizers or accompaniments for salad luncheons. Ham cubes are good in potato and macaroni salads.
