Mystery of British Frogman Remains International Puzzle

London (UPI) – Four years ago Tuesday two men checked out of a seedy waterfront hotel in Portsmouth, England. One has never been identified. The other touched off one of the greatest international mysteries of the post-war era.

There are some who insist yet today that the mystery is still unsolved. They are certain Cmdr. Lionel "Buster" Crabb, the greatest frogman hero of World War II, is alive.

"There is no doubt about it," says Neville Armstrong of the publishing firm of Neville Spearman Ltd. "Crabb is alive and working in Russia."

Armstrong's firm has published a book documenting that claim. "Frogman Extraordinary" by Bernard Hutton is said to be based on a secret Russian dossier, smuggled across the Iron Curtain, which "concerns Crabb's dive to examine a Russian cruiser, his capture by the Russians and what happened to him after that."

Believed in Grave

But there are others who claim that the mystery of Buster Crabb has been solved–so far as Crabb himself is concerned. They believe his headless, handless corpse lies in an unmarked grave at Portsmouth, where he died on a still-secret mission.

Whatever the ending, the known elements of the Crabb case are still mysterious enough to outdo the intricate plot of an imaginative fiction writer.

As in all mysteries, the timing of events is of prime importance. Here is the timetable of what is known about the disappearance of Lionel Crabb:

–April 17, 1956: Crabb, a famous and much - decorated frogman, checked into the inexpensive Sallyport hotel on Portsmouth's waterfront with a man called "Mr. Smith."

–April 18: Three Soviet ships steamed into Portsmouth Harbor carrying then Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev to their "B and K" visit to Britain.

–April 19: Russian sailors got a two-minute look at a mysterious frogman on the surface of the water between two of the Soviet ships.

Luggage Vanished

That afternoon "Mr. Smith" returned to the Sallyport Hotel and checked out for both himself and Crabb. Crabb's luggage vanished. Some time later, criminal investigation department detectives ripped out of the hotel registration the page listing their stay.

–April 29: The admiralty officially announced that Crabb was missing and presumed dead. It said he had disappeared while testing underwater apparatus some three miles from the Soviet ships.

–May 4: Russia sent a formal protest to Britain about the frogman who appeared near the VIP ships.

–May 9: Then Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden, in a formal apologetic note, told Russia the frogman "was in all probability Cmdr. Crabb. His presence in the vicinity of the destroyers occurred without any permission whatsoever."

Parliament thundered with questions. Late that afternoon Eden rose to say: "It would not be in the public interest to disclose the circumstances in which Cmdr. Crabb is presumed to have met his death . . . what was done was done without the authority or knowledge of her majesty's ministers. Appropriate disciplinary steps are being taken."

–Speculation filled the press of two continents for weeks thereafter. Repeated questions in Parliament got nowhere.

–Early in June, 1957, 14 months later: A headless, handless body in a black frogman's suit washed up at Chichester, near Portsmouth.

Can't Resist Conclusion

–June 26, 1957: Coroner George Bridgman ruled that the body was Crabb's. "Minor" details of the body "added up to a conclusion which cannot be resisted and was beyond sheer coincidence," he said.

–Early February, 1960: Armstrong made disclosures about the new book on Crabb.

–Feb. 17, 1960: Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, under pressure in Parliament, said "I have no reason to think there is any truth in the suggestion that the coroner (who ruled that the headless body was Crabb's) was wrong." He said no new information about Crabb had been received.

Those are the known facts. They leave a lot of questions unanswered including this one:

Is the body buried in Portsmouth one planted by Russian submarines – to cover up capture and removal of Crabb to Russia?

POST-WAR MYSTERY–Four years ago Tuesday one of the greatest inter - national mysteries of the post-war era began. The central figure was Cmdr. Lionel "Buster" Crabb, Britain's greatest frogman hero of World War II. Some believe Crabb was killed, in some fashion or other, while diving to examine a Russian cruiser at Portsmouth, England. Others believe that he is still alive. Crabb is shown in diving gear shortly before his dive near the Russian ship and his ultimate disappearance. —(UPI Telephoto)

Hollywood – Mrs. Florence Adland, mother of Beverly Aadland, repeating a conversation with Beverly about charges she faces of contributing to the delinquency of a minor:

"Beverly told me, 'Mama, I know we were framed.'"

Memphis, Tenn.–A friend of rock 'n' roll singer Elvis Presley, describing Elvis' adjustment to civilian life:

"He takes situations more serious. Other than that, it's the same old Elvis. He's back to the old ways, stays up all night, and sleeps all day."

Paris–Eric Peugeot, 4, contradicting police suspicions that one of his kidnapers was a woman:

"I never saw a woman. There were only two men with me all the time. They were very nice."

London–Church of England Canon John Collins, a leader of the four-day "ban the bomb" march from the nuclear research station at Aldermaston to London, commenting on the thousands of marchers who took part:

"They've got to listen to us now. They just can't write us off as a bunch of cranks anymore."

Installment Credit Pushers Fed Up With Inflation Blame

New York (UPI) – Business men who sell goods on installment credit are getting fed up with being called "economic dope pushers" who cause inflation.

Because installment buying of automobiles, appliances, furnishings and other merchandise has soared, there's a campaign in congress to pass more laws regulating installment loans. Most of the bills, like that of Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), aim particularly at making loan companies and merchants spell out in advance all the details of the cost of installment loans.

Lots of merchants favor this. The National Association of Manufacturers, the American Industrial Bankers Association and the American Bankers Association are against it. They say it would put a big burden on business and fear it would put the federal government in a position to bring about sudden halts and restraints in installment credit that would injure the national economy. And they offer figures to show installment credit is not inflationary.

Loans Increase

Installment loans to consumers jumped $408 million in February–the latest month for which figures are available.

There's no question that some people can no more resist drowning themselves in a sea of easy installment credit than an addict can resist heroin. And some installment sellers press loans on hapless victims with the remorsefulness of a narcotics pusher and "pack" the financing charges with the same ruthless audacity. Sometimes even supposedly reputable dealers and finance houses aren't above padding–even doubling– insurance premiums and other items in the whole finance charge and pocketing the extra profit.

The public's ignorance of how installment financing works still is appalling; even well-informed people forget that a basic 6 per cent interest rate on a monthly installment account is a true interest rate of nearly 12 per cent a year and that other fees may run the total finance charge as high as 28 per cent a year on the sales price–although that's way above average.

"But the argument that installment credit is inflationary doesn't hold water," insists President B. F. Wonderlic of General Finance Corp. of Chicago. Wonderlic told a recent consumer credit conference at Washington University in St. Louis the truth is that the margin between the amount of money people have in savings and the increase in consumer credit actually has widened in the past five years by around $10 billion.

Savings Estimated

We had a $5.4 billion jump in consumer credit in 1955, Wonderlic said, but in that year the securities and exchange commission estimated Americans' net financial savings at only 7.1 billion, so the jump in consumer debt only represented a potential charge against 76 per cent of the people's sevings.

Last year we had another $5.4 billion rise in consumer debt–but this time, the SEC estimated net savings at $16.5 billion–so the rise in consumer debt only represented a potential charge of 33 per cent against savings.

Wonderlic also pointed out that while auto installment loans were easier to get in 1958 and 1959 than ever before, auto sales were nowhere near record levels either year. Indeed, 1958 was almost the auto industry's worst year in a decade, even though down payments were as low as 10 per cent and financing averaged 36 months.

Group Changes Site for Meeting

Salem–(UPI)–The Legislative Interim Committee on Education announced Saturday it will hold its April 29-30 meeting in Portland instead of Salem as first announced.

The committee's preliminary agenda includes suggestions for changing the state system of transportation aid, the future of the community college program in Oregon, discussion of alternate methods of distribution of state aid, and a review of the State Tax Commission report on 1959-60 property tax levies for school purposes.

Safe Yields $5,000 To Portland Yeggs

Portland – (UPI) – The safe of the Portland Postal Employees Credit Union was robbed of about $5,000 during the week end, police reported.

Officers said the burglary occurred some time between Friday night and the close of office hours and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Authorities said $4,925, and possibly more, was taken.

Silverton Boy, 3, Dies in Home Fire

Silverton – (UPI) – A small Silverton boy died at his family home here Sunday as fire destroyed the structure.

James Strom, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Strom, would have been three years old Wednesday.

The boy and five young brothers and sisters were playing in the house seven miles northeast of Silverton when flames raced through the structure.

The five who escaped had gone into the yard just before the fire. Mrs. Strom was alone with the children when the blaze occurred. She tried to find the boy but was forced back by flames The body was found under a bed.

Firemen did not know the cause of the blaze immediately.

Youth Dies as Car Hits Gasoline Pump

Vancouver, Wash. – (UPI) – An Orchards, Wash., youth, Gerry Arionus, 14, died in St. Joseph hospital Sunday shortly before noon of burns suffered when his car crashed into a gasoline pump at Sifton store and garage, east of Orchards.

The car struck the pump and set fire to the building, according to the Clark county sheriff's office.

When police arrived, Arionus was rolling on the ground trying to extinguish his flaming clothes, and the building was ablaze.

The Sifton building, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Basil E. Sayles, was destroyed along with their automobile parked inside.

Fall From Cliff Kills Salem Boy

Pacific City – (UPI) – A 15-year-old Salem boy died in a 130-foot fall over a cliff at Cape Kiwanis Saturday.

The victim, Jack Dewey, was with a group of 30 De Molays and their dates on an outing.

Another Salem boy, Charles Akers, 17, climbed down another area of the Cape but young Dewey's body was carried away by the tide as he reached it. Akers, who suffered cuts and bruises, was trapped at the bottom of the cliff and had to be rescued.

The victim was playing near the cliff top when shale rock gave way.

FOILED

Hartford, Conn. (UPI)–Her "burglar alarm" worked fine, but Mrs. Dorothy Langley was robbed anyway. She attached a bell to her pocketbook and heard it tinkling while she was at the theater, but the thief escaped.

SHRINK

Has your dollar been getting smaller? Can we hope to avoid sky-rocketing prices in the future? We can! This is the studied opinion of 64 leading representatives of education, government, labor and business, who conferred recently at the American Assembly. They agreed that America should strive for three goals: dynamic growth . . . low unemployment . . . reasonably stable prices. But it won't be easy! Needed is the whole-hearted cooperation of all Americans in working to achieve a steadily rising productivity.
Find out what must be done – and the role you can play. Write for free booklet, "Prices, Growth and You", to American Assembly, Columbia University, New York 27, N. Y.
