

Concert Set In Gold Hill Thursday

Gold Hill—Hanby Elementary school will present the annual spring concert Thursday, April 21, at 8 p. m. in the school's gymnasium. Pupils of the fourth through eighth grades will participate in the combined concert which will consist of choral and band numbers, featuring two different instrumental quartet groups. The public is invited, according to Gilbert Mack, principal of the Gold Hill schools.

Charles Cook, Hanby school band director who is retiring this year, will direct the band, opening the program with a march "Hall To The Huskies" by Porter. Among other selections will be an overture, based on the old slave song "Lize Jane," by Ostling, and "Cuban Capers" by Kinyon.

Numbers to be sung by the fourth and fifth grade chorus will include "Music Alone Shall Live," "Ode to the Blue Danube," directed by Marvin Thorne. Hanby music teacher, Mrs. Ivy Doherty will be pianist for all vocal groups.

A clarinet quartet made up of Norma Schatz, Greg Apple, Gregg Schmidt, and Mr. Cook will play a prayer from "Hansel and Gretel" by Humperdinck, and the Finale from "Quartet in G" by Bohne.

The second quartet will play two movements, Bourée and Gavotte, from Bach's "Chamber Suite No. 3," which was composed about 1730. Written in D for two oboes, three trumpets, strings and timpani, Mr. Cook scored the work in quartette form and changed the key from D to E flat. This quartet includes Barbara Schatz, trumpet; Shirley Kell, clarinet; Donald Gall, trombone; and Mr. Cook, clarinet.

Selections to be sung by the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades chorus will include "Roll On Columbia," "Military Salute," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and others.

New Officers Elected For Honor Group

Other new officers are Mrs. Mevie Woodward, first vice-president; Mrs. Elsie Turner, second vice-president; Mrs. Luella Morris, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clara Feder, recording secretary; Mrs. Kathryn Stanciloff, parliamentarian; Miss Vida Scripser, treasurer.

Miss Dorothy Wilson, Medford senior high school Spanish teacher, spoke on the role foreign languages have in the education of today's youth. The opportunities offered to the student with a speaking and writing knowledge of at least one foreign language, are many and ever-increasing as our world becomes smaller, she said.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Young Adults Hold Dinner Last Week

Eagle Point—A spaghetti dinner was held Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chamberlain in Eagle Point by the Young Adult class of the Eagle Point Bible Community church. Thirty-two attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Pulley prepared the spaghetti; potluck dishes completed the meal. Mrs. Dave Schneider was in charge of the evening's entertainment.

Grandma's Fashion Scores

New York—The collette which abounds in spring and summer sports and lounge-wear actually is "septagenarian" in women's wardrobes, says one pants maker.

Manufacturer-designer Jack Winter said that as early as the 19th century, a riding habit with pantaloons galloped onto the scene, and long bloomers were considered appropriate for beach wear. In 1889, said Winter, the divided skirt, grandma of today's cutouts, was introduced for sportswear.

POTPOURRI

A recent issue of the Beverly Hills Citizen in California carried a full page advertisement of the platform of Anne Redfield Heaver, who is running for congress from the 16th district. Mrs. Heaver, the former Anne Fuson, spent her girlhood in Medford and is remembered, among other things, for having won the woman's Southern Oregon golf championship at Rogue Valley Country club when she was but 14 years old.

Mrs. Heaver, who has a long and impressive list of civic accomplishments since moving to Beverly Hills, is running as a conservative every-Republican. She considers the federal government as too bureaucratic and wasteful, and without moral fiber; she criticizes the state department for having allowed Nikita Khrushchev to visit this country, believes in loyalty oaths, supports the McCarran Immigration act and the Connolly Amendment, and says she will work for passage of the 23rd amendment.

If personal appearances help, Mrs. Heaver's campaign will get a big boost. Both she and her husband look extremely handsome in the pictures which accompanied the advertisement and story in the Beverly Hills paper.

This is the time of year when a gardener isn't happy indoors. The sights and smells outdoors are so inviting, and besides, there's work to be done. Yesterday morning was ideal for working out—the off-and-on rain and sunshine made it particularly good for transplanting.

For two hours we dug, divided and re-set chrysanthemums and phlox, found a new spot for some border plants and watered those which had been transplanted Sunday. The planting included a clump of dwarf iris which the Harlan Bosworths brought by Sunday, and which came from the garden of Mrs. Bosworth's father, O. V. Myers.

Because the little pale blue flowers, flecked with yellow, are so exquisite, we took time out to call Mrs. Kenneth Farley, iris expert, to see if she knew the correct name. (Mrs. Bosworth and Mr. Myers said they knew the flowers only as "poor man's orchids.")

One thing led to another during the telephone conversation, and we ended up by driving around to see Mrs. Farley in the early afternoon, tiny iris in hand.

A search in a copy of Mrs. Farley's Sidney Mitchell book, "Iris for Every Garden" produced the information that it is an iris cristata, this being in the evansia or crested group. Mrs. Farley says it is generally believed that they are more difficult to grow here than most iris, and she was interested to know that they had flourished for a long period in Mr. Myers' yard.

Pushing to the back of our mind the thought of a 3:30 p. m. appointment, potpourri lingered in Mrs. Farley's garden for quite some time. In addition to her hundreds of iris, this gardener has 40 or 50 lilacs, several different types of flowering cherries and magnolias, more daphne than we knew existed (including one with heavenly blue flowers) and any number of other flowers and shrubs which were new to us. We came home with an armload of lilacs, one ball of white blossoms from a viburnum which has an intoxicating perfume, and our usual firm resolve to skip on something else and spend more time and money in the yard.

Our garden would never win a prize for planning, or care, or probably anything else, but it's a living testimonial to the fact that gardeners are friendly, and that they love to share. Our garden is filled with plants, and shrubs and trees that have come from the yards and gardens of friends and acquaintances all over the county. Hundreds of other gardeners can say the same of their yards.

On a television program the other day three noted men discussed in deep seriousness the possibility that a worldwide atomic war might conceivably bring about destruction of our earth. On an April day, with the lilacs and cherries blooming above us, the pansies and tulips at our feet and the utterly wonderful growing green far and wide, we don't for a moment worry about the end of the world.—O.S.

Berliners Good At Finding Fitting Names For Buildings

By GAL PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

Berlin—UPI—Berliners impress the tourist as people not much impressed by anything imposing.

They are deft at deflating pomposity, skilled at finding a new and usually unflattering, but fitting, name for some new and costly edifice.

And if something moves them, they often cover their feelings with a flippant or impertinent remark.

Every West Berliner I mentioned the gratitude the city felt for the fuel and food flown in in 1948-49 in the famous airlift. Yet they named the airplanes which saved the city from Communist conquest "Raisin Bombers."

Berliners thought it altogether fitting that the first large office building constructed after World War II housed an aspirin company, which exports many of its headache pills to the United States.

The tallest building, which houses the municipal administration, is called the "Civil Servants' Silo." A towering new white apartment house is known as the "Eye Tooth."

The new Congress Hall, designed by the American architect H. H. Stubbins, is a marvel of modern architecture—with ample midsection and a sweeping, white convex roof. Residents refer to it either as the "Pregnant Oyster," or "The Big Jaw" for all the "jawing" done during international meetings.

The modern glass and steel quarters of Berlin's outwear industry is called "Bikini House," for the open midsection dividing the base from top.

The nude statue of an Olympic runner is "Berlin's Last Taxpayer."

A large bronze monument of abstract design in one park goes under the name of "Hopeless Case" because many residents find its symbolism obscure.

And they wisecrack that a series of statues of three national heroes—Bismark, and Generals Moltke and Roon—"Are our last three fighters in reserve."

They received his master's degree in music from the University of Oregon. His Medford High school choir have won honors and awards in the past years on tours throughout the northwest. Most notable was the appearance of last year's choir at the Northwest Music Educators convention at Seattle. Mr. Sjolund plans to take this group to Portland, Eugene, and other points north on a two day tour next week, April 28-29.

In this production Mr. Sjolund is directing both the music and the dramatic portions.

John Lacy is student director for the choir. Miss Judy Carver will be organist for "Oklahoma," and Mrs. William J. Williams will be the piano accompanist.

Many students of the choir have been busy with behind-the-scenes activities to make this musical a success. Business manager is Paul Moore. Programs are in charge of DeAnne Taylor, with Jim Henson and Ruth Coovert, art students, assisting.

The committee in charge of make-up consists of Linda Jo Walter, chair man; Lucille Lowry, her assistant; Howard Kennett, Ann Barker, Marcia Williams, Rebecca Rowan, Julia Yoakley, Chris Prentice, Jacl White, Linda Slessler, Linda Morlan, and the cast.

Carolyn Mencke has been chairman in charge of publicity. She has done publicity for service clubs; Art House for radio; Judy Bash, television; Joyce Roelfs and Lynn Creel, posters; Ellen Montgomery and Julie Jahn, let-sharon Huffman, downtown, Wally Huffman, school, Jim Henson, photography, and Judy Van Gordon, newspaper.

"Oklahoma" opens tonight and runs through Saturday night. All seats are reserved and some are still available for each evening.

Beauty Expert Gives Exercises For Feet

New York—(UPI)—If you wear high heels most of the day, your feet need exercise to stretch tendons and calf muscles. A beauty expert recommends these exercises:

In your bare feet, support yourself properly, stand on a phone book and curl your toes over the edge. This will stretch tendons on top of the foot. Another way is to try picking up a pencil with the toes.

For trimmer ankles, use the ankle as an axis, rotating the foot in a large circle—five times clockwise, five times counter-clockwise.

To stretch the calf, stand a foot away from a wall, facing it with feet parallel, knees straight and hands flat against the wall. Try to touch chest to wall without lifting your heels off the floor.

Pewter Wasn't Precious New York—(UPI)—Pewter is precious material to many collectors today. But at one time the metal was widely used for pipes, sinks, cisterns and for pipes, sinks, cisterns and straight experts.
