By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
Scottsbluff, Neb. — Terry Carpenter, the delegate who nominated "Joe Smith" for vice president at the 1956 Republican National Convention, stating he has new plans if he is sent to this year's convention:
"People don't like to have everything wrapped up and tied for them."

New York—Mrs. Rubin Koral, expressing motherly concern about her 18-year-old son, who arrived from Russia today after being separated from his family for more than 16 years:
"He looks thin."

Washington—Republican National Chairman Thruston B. Morton, accusing Democrats of backing excessive spending proposals in an effort to provide something for every voter:
"Let the tiniest scratch or pimple appear on the national economic body, and in rush the big spenders with the federal aid 'band-aids'."

New York—Convicted bookmaker Hyman Levy, agreeing that his lawyer should be excused after he was granted immunity from prosecution to testify before the state investigating commission:

Decision Due in McDonald Case

Portland — UPI — Circuit Judge Eugene Oppenheimer indicated today he will render his decision Monday on the proposed motion for the postponement of the trial of Levi S. McDonald, charged in the Jan. 31 dynamiting of newspaper trucks.

Following a hearing on motions for either a postponement or a change of venue of the April 26 trial, Oppenheimer said he would have to study the matter more closely before giving his decision.

Oppenheimer, however, did rule against the change of venue motion by McDonald.

"There will be no change of venue because the defendant has indicated he does not believe he can get a fair trial anywhere in the state. Therefore, since we will be bringing him to trial against his wishes anywhere in Oregon, I can see no advantage of holding it outside Multnomah county," he said.

Medford Youth Is Cited by Police

City police cited a 16-year-old Medford youth for violation of the basic rule following a two-car traffic accident yesterday morning in which another youth sustained minor injuries.

Cited was Russell Allen Mitchell Jr., 412 West Jackson st., operator of a car which hit the rear of a vehicle operated by Joseph Daniel Bishop, 18, of 824 Beckman st.

The accident occurred about 4:20 a.m. yesterday when the Bishop vehicle pulled to a stop at a red light on Stewart ave., at Riverside ave. According to police, the Mitchell vehicle struck the rear of Bishop's car, knocking both cars across Riverside ave.

A passenger in Mitchell's car, Clifford Albert Coiner, 17, of 129 Taft st., was taken to the Rogue Valley hospital where he was treated and released for a mild concussion and a cut on the scalp.

Bowmers Discuss Nationwide Tour; Returned Recently

Ashland—Angus L. Bowmer, professor of drama and founder-director of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, returned to Ashland recently after a three-month study tour of U. S. theaters and university drama departments.

Bowmer and his wife traveled under the joint auspices of Southern Oregon college and the Festival association. During their visit to 35 theaters and drama departments, the Bowmers studied curricula and plant facilities, interviewed and auditioned students for the Festival.

Bowmer reported that he was most interested in the university plants in regard to proposed expansion at Southern Oregon college. A new speech arts building and additional course offerings are under consideration at the college, he reported.

"As representatives of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and Southern Oregon college, we were well received wherever we went," Bowmer reported. "We interviewed some splendid talent and found interest all over the country in the Festival."

Some of the stops they made included the New York university, University of California, American Academy of Dramatic Arts, Pasadena Playhouse, and the Dallas Theatre Center. In New York, the Bowmers attended a three-day convention of the American National Theatre and Academy.

Bowmer has resumed instruction at Southern Oregon college for spring term.

State Highway Department To Let Contracts

Salem—UPI—The State Highway Commission Thursday afternoon authorized the Highway Department to let contracts for nearly $9 million worth of work on the new interstate highway system in Oregon.

Biggest job is the Cello-Biggs section of interstate highway 80N, U.S. 30. The $4,400,000 project probably will involve several contracts.

Other sections are both on interstate highway 5—old U.S. 99—and include the Rice Hill-Oakland section, $3,200,000, and the Goshen-Coast Fork of the Willamette strip, $1,200,000. These will probably be one-shot contracts.

The department said the first contracts probably will be let next summer.

The commission denied a request by the city of Eugene for a joint project and approved projects in three other cities.

Too Expensive
Eugene wanted the commission to go in on a $250,000 project for placement of curbs and widening of pavement entrances to Eugene on existing Highway 99. The state would have paid 75 per cent of the cost but rejected the project as too expensive.

The Commission agreed to put up about $200,000 for construction of a one-way couplet in Roseburg at Stephens and Pine sts.

Also approved was $7,500 for a widening project on 4th st. in Corvallis and $41,250 for widening the bridge at the north entrance to Dallas.
