

MOVIES

Once, a small girl, Jane, had a dad, Henry, who brought her up to be anything but stage-struck.

Not long ago, she was just a quiet, attractive girl with a famous name; now she's made her own name mean something to Hollywood and Broadway

"Sure, Dad has helped me," she admits. "But the most important thing he's done for me is to pass along his instincts as an actor. The rest of it has been routine. We don't even talk much about acting, although we're close and see each other whenever possible. I went to him before my screen tests, and he gave me some valuable tips."

Jane is sure she has found her vocation. "I'm a dedicated actress," she maintains, "and it's no snap for me, or even fun. 'Tall Story' took 35 days to make. While I was saying my lines in front of a mirror, everything was fine. But before I'd get in front of the cameras, I'd start wondering if I could handle the part. One day I'd decide I could do anything, and it would be great. Next day I'd be crying hysterically."

One of Jane's ambitions is to play opposite her father. "We'd like to make a movie together. I'd love to do a part where I hate him. I remember when I was little and Dad punished me. I'd never dare talk back to him. I'd just go to my room and sulk, planning all sorts of dire things that I could do to him. I'd think 'I hate you,' but the next time I saw him face to face, it was forgotten. But while we were feuding, I really felt intensely. If I could recapture that, then it would be great on film."

Like most actresses who make the grade, Jane has had a guiding genius plotting her career. Director Joshua Logan singled her out as a sure-fire actress after only three summer-stock roles and signed her to a five-year contract. Unhesitatingly, he cast her in the lead in "Tall Story."

Having Logan in her corner is a pretty good omen. The brilliant director has been instrumental in "making" such stars as Paul Newman, Kim Stanley, June Allyson, and France Nuyen.

Any lingering doubts about Jane's dedication to her new career were dispelled when the play, "There Was a Little Girl," tried out in Boston. Louis Jean Heydt, the veteran actor who played opposite her, collapsed and died after the first scene. His understudy filled in, and Jane, although shaken, played her part to critical plaudits.

After that, even the doubting Thomases were willing to admit that she was more than "Henry's daughter." They recognized her as Jane Fonda, young and beautiful, but, more important, talented and with a bright career before her. Their comment: "Couldn't happen to a nicer girl. And isn't it great for old Hank?"

Medically acclaimed electromyograph proves Absorbine Jr.

Relieves Tired, Aching Muscles Twice As Fast!

Electromyograph shows that after normal period of rest when Absorbine Jr. is applied, tired, aching muscles recover twice as fast as when "nature takes its course."

When your muscles ache, doctors can now read their electric waves through the wonders of the new electromyograph machine. They have proved that Absorbine Jr. "brings aching muscles back" twice as fast as nature can.

These studies showed the speed with which Absorbine Jr. starts treating tired, aching muscles. When rubbed on, Absorbine Jr.

actually dilates the peripheral blood vessel walls, making local blood-flow speed up. Unlike mere pain-killers, Absorbine Jr. helps you get better, faster.
