Morse Denies 'Stop Kennedy' Drive

Opposition Said To Be Strictly on Political Grounds

Des Moines —(UPI)—Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) said Sunday night Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass.) appeared to be suffering from "campaign fatigue."

Morse denied that there was an organized "stop Kennedy" drive under way in Oregon where Kennedy, Morse and several other candidates have filed for the presidential primary next month.

Kennedy charged Saturday that a campaign had been launched to get all Democratic candidates but Morse to drop out of the Oregon primary.

Just a Duel
"I think Jack is suffering from campaign fatigue," Morse commented.

Morse, here to speak at the kickoff dinner of the Jewish Welfare Federation fund raising drive, said he, personally was conducting a "stop Kennedy" campaign "But it's just Senator Morse against Senator Kennedy."

He said his opposition to Kennedy was strictly on political grounds and the religious issue did not enter into it. Morse said Kennedy deserved credit for "bringing the religious issue out in the open" but it was his opinion that Kennedy would gain nothing more "from further drumming on it."

Morse said he "couldn't be more serious" about anything than his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

He predicted that the nomination convention at Los Angeles next July would be deadlocked after 10 ballots and "anyone could win, and it might be Wayne Morse."

Anchored to Adlai
Morse added, however, that in the event of a 10-ballot deadlock, he believed Adlai Stevenson, former Illinois governor and twice the Democratic standard bearer, would have the best chance to get the nomination.

Morse said he "most certainly would" accept the vice presidential nomination regardless of who the Democrats selected as their presidential candidate.

He said he would support any Democrat because whoever got the nomination "will be 10 times better as president than (Vice President) Richard Nixon."
