Chessman's Attorney Names Man Said 'Real' LA Bandit

San Quentin, Calif. — (UPI) — An attorney for Carl Chessman named a man Monday he said might be the "real" Red Light Bandit — but the convict-author's prosecutor said the claim was just another "fairy tale."

Chessman, 38, is scheduled to die in the San Quentin gas chamber next Monday morning for the Red Light Bandit's crimes of kidnaping, robbery and rape. He was convicted in Los Angeles in 1948.

Attorney George T. Davis brought the name of Charles (Joe) Savarine Terranova back into the case late Monday, shortly after the U.S. Supreme Court denied Chessman his 16th appeal for a full-scale review of the case. It also rejected his bid for a ninth stay of execution.

Terranova, 39, served time in San Quentin for burglary, auto theft and robbery. He is sought at present as a parole violator and on charges of writing bad checks.

Chessman first mentioned Terranova at the time of his arrest. The missing man was mentioned again during the 1948 trial, but since he has been on death row the convict-author has steadfastly refused to accuse anyone.

Chessman Still Hopful
However, Chessman said during an exclusive interview Monday that he saw faint hope of escaping the gas chamber for the ninth time on the basis of "new evidence" involving Terranova.

The alleged evidence was presented in Davis' office by private investigator William Linhart, Richmond, Calif., and Argosy magazine writers Milton Machlin and William Woodfield.

New Recognition Of Strength in Allied Camp

By STEWART HENSLEY
Washington — (UPI) — French President Charles de Gaulle's Washington visit was a personal triumph or rare proportions which strengthened the sentimental 182-year-old ties between the United States and its oldest ally.

It brought de Gaulle new recognition as the savior of his country's political structure and as a tower of strength in the Allied camp as it prepares to meet Russia at the summit next month.

The warm-hearted public welcome and high official praise were evidence of the French leader's success in his dedicated campaign to restore the "grandeur" of his country.

But his visit failed, as he knew it would, to bring the one thing he wants most for his beloved France — complete equality with Britain and the United States in global military and political strategy, with a veto power over decision of the Allies when he disagrees.

De Gaulle's demand for a place in a global triumvirate was first set forth in a memorandum to President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in September 1958. They have never bought the idea and probably never will.

De Gaulle knew there was no point pushing it now, so he didn't. But the idea is not dead. It lives on in the mind of the man who sees in himself the personification of France's glory. It is not likely to die.

Avoid Controversial Issues
Eisenhower and de Gaulle, in their Camp David and White House talks, reached agreement on things their foreign ministers already had nailed down — allied policy at the summit on disarmament, Germany and Berlin.

They were careful not to spoil the warmth, comradeship and high hope and resolve. They sidestepped issues on which they had no hope of reaching agreement.

De Gaulle dropped his proposal that the West invite Russia to join in limiting arms shipments to turbulent Africa. The French leader also refrained from pressing for his plan to invite Russia to join in a cooperative East-West program of aid to Africa and other underdeveloped areas.

He had found that Eisenhower didn't think it would work.

Committee OK's Youth Corps Plan

Washington — (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations committee has approved a proposal of the late Sen. Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon asking study of a plan for a youth corps to train young people to serve overseas in programs of technical cooperation.

The committee included the plan in the mutual security authorization act of 1960. Under it the president would arrange for the study of advisability regarding establishment of the corps.

Mrs. Maurice Neuberger, widow of the senator and candidate for his Senate seat, said she was gratified by the committee action because it gave recognition to the late senator's interest in opportunities for young people and in foreign affairs.

Oppenheimer Points To Scientific Gap

Portland — (UPI) — Atomic physicist J. Roger Oppenheimer told about 1,000 persons at Reed College Monday night there is too big a gap between the common man and scientists on the verge of great discoveries.

Oppenheimer said that in democratic societies of the past there existed a body of knowledge available and comprehensible to all citizens.

But today, he said, the accelerating growth, and specialization characteristics of modern science have produced bodies of knowledge far removed from general comprehension.

Mrs. Adland's Lawyer Seeks To Halt Hearing

Los Angeles — (UPI) — Mrs. Florence Adland's attorney said today he planned to file a motion with the appeal court to halt the preliminary hearing of his client on charges of contributing to her daughter's delinquency.

Marvin Mitchelson failed Monday when he asked Superior Judge Allen Miller to suspend the hearing until he had a chance to question the daughter, Beverly, 17, about a wild wine-drinking party she and her mother took part in at their apartment March 19. Miller ordered the hearing to continue today.

Pictures Introduced
"It's not fair," said Mitchelson. "I have to question Beverly to find out about that party. Mrs. Adland was sleeping most of the time and wasn't feeling well."

Mrs. Adland was charged with five counts of contributing to Beverly's delinquency. A set of pictures said to have been taken at the party by a former friend of the Adlands was introduced at the hearing yesterday. They showed Mrs. Adland and Beverly clad in pajamas and in separate beds with partially dressed men.

Ronald Shedd, 20, who said he met Beverly while she was the playmate of the late Errol Flynn and he was the actor's personal secretary, testified he was one of the five men at the party.

Got in Scuffle
He said Mrs. Adland and Beverly each had several bottles of wine. At one point mother and daughter got in a scuffle with each other and began pulling hair and hitting each other, he said.

Beverly appeared briefly at the hearing to give only her name and age. She has been held at Juvenile Hall since April 9 when actor William Stanciu, 21, was accidentally fatally shot in her apartment.

Wrong Number Saves Family in House Fire

Milwaukee, Ore. — (UPI) — Fire early today gutted the home of Mrs. Reba Sylvester here.

But thanks to a lucky telephone call, Mrs. Sylvester and two children escaped unharmed. Another child was visiting for the night.

She told state police she discovered the fire after answering the telephone in the early morning hours. The call turned out to be a wrong number.

Board of Education Plans Academic Position Cutbacks

Portland — (UPI) — The Board of Higher Education was planning today to save half a million dollars by cutting back 30 academic positions at Oregon State and Oregon.

Enrollment Reduction
Chancellor John B. Richards told the Finance committee the positions could be eliminated because of an expected reduction of more than 1,000 in enrollments in the state system.

The committee adopted Richards' recommendation that a reserve fund of $500,000 be impounded out of the Board's projected $33 million 1960-61 budget by cutting back 20 academic positions at OSC and 10 at Oregon. The reserve fund would be available should enrollment estimates be exceeded.

Willing To Cooperate
Richards said enrollment prospects were down mostly at OSC and Portland State but that Portland State and other smaller schools were not in a position to absorb staff cuts. Oregon State could not bear the entire burden, he added.

Dr. O. Meredith Wilson, president of the University of Oregon, said he was "willing to cooperate" but added Oregon would have to operate at a student-teacher ratio the Legislature did not intend.

The Board's Building Committee approved preliminary plans for a $612,000 project for married student housing at Oregon State. It also accepted final plans for the addition to the Physics-Chemistry building at OSC and for a humanities building for Portland State.

Quotes From the News

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
United Nations, N.N.—Former President Truman, describing the possibility of a change in Soviet diplomatic policy as only a hope:
"I have never met (Soviet Premier Nikita S.) Khrushchev, and I don't know what he stands for. I did come in contact with (the late Josef V.) Stalin, and I know what he stood for: He didn't keep agreements."

Hollywood—Linda Christian, discussing the diaries she is referring to in writing her autobiography:
"My diaries are all written in different languages, depending on the country I was in when I wrote them. When I was in South America and Spain I wrote in Spanish. In France I wrote in French. For the long time I lived in Hollywood, I wrote in English."

SOAP BUBBLES help telephone men keep your calls going through without a hitch. Here's how: Many cables that carry your calls are filled with air to keep out harmful moisture. If a leak occurs, the air escapes. And we can find the leak quickly by covering the cable with a soapy solution and watching for bubbles. This cuts time and costs of repairs and helps us give you more for your telephone dollar.
