Philip Hanson To Present 'Kings and Clowns' Show

Philip Hanson, versatile Shakespearean actor, will perform his one-man show, "Kings and Clowns" at Medford High school Sunday, May 15, under the sponsorship of Tudor Guild.

For the past several months the actor has been presenting the show for high school and college audiences. The appearances have been booked by Vos Poetica, national concert association.

In "Kings and Clowns" Hanson performs over 60 characters in two hours. Without costumes or scenery, using only a chair and two spotlights and wearing modern dress he moves from character to character.

Despite the fact that many believe Shakespeare too advanced for high school audiences, Hanson's show has been received with great enthusiasm by both junior and senior high school students. The Spokane high school audience, according to newspaper reports, broke into the performance again and again with stormy applause, and the Portland audience sat spellbound even after the bell for the lunch period had sounded.
