

London—This is a sketch of Princess Margaret's wedding dress as seen by Women's Wear Daily's London artist. Bridesmaids (rear) dresses are almost exact copies of dresses worn by Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret when they were little girls. At the request of Princess Margaret, the royal dressmaker, Norman Hartnell, has made a wedding dress which is described as "monastic" in its simplicity; no embroidery and no decoration. Walking, Kneeling in Gown To Be Practiced by Princess

By ROBERT MUELL
United Press International
London—Princess Margaret, whose diminutive size makes it difficult for her to wear elaborate gowns, took delivery of her wedding dress early so she could practice walking and kneeling in it before her May 6 wedding.

The Princess, friends reported, also has ordered satin-silver shoes with platform soles to build up her height.

The Princess—barely five feet tall in her nylons—is taking every advantage of fashion to give herself additional height for the day. Friends said she planned to have a bouffant hair-do topped by a tiara or diamond bandeau from which the veil will be suspended.

The Princess' child bridesmaids will join her in private rehearsals at Clarence House this week.

There has been so much unfavorable publicity since the engagement was announced that Princess Margaret and her fiancé are apprehensive about any unplanned developments.

They seemed depressed by the news that Queen Elizabeth was confined to her room at Badminton house, home of the Duke of Beaufort, by a chill. The chill was described as "slight" but the Queen does not shake off colds easily and the wedding is less than a week away.

Princess Margaret and Armstrong-Jones, who also went to Badminton along with the Queen to attend the annual horse trials, went out on a shopping expedition there before returning to the royal lodge at Windsor where they were spending the rest of the week end.

Two Labor members of Parliament have demanded exact figures on the cost of the wedding and the Caribbean honeymoon on the royal yacht Britannia.

M. P. Marcus Lipton asked the Minister of Works, Lord

Wedding Gown Design 'Leaked'

London—Sketches of Princess Margaret's wedding gown today in the press showed it to be a glamorous white silk organdie dress with modest v-neck and fitted waist, a style the princess favors.

It has three-quarter sleeves and a slightly full skirt which forms a short train. A white tulle veil held in place by a diamond diadem from the crown jewels completes the ensemble.

Fashion world sources said the sketches were "roughly accurate," although royal dressmaker Norman Hartnell has tried to keep the design a secret.

Hartnell was reported trying to locate "the leak" that gave advance details of the gown to the world.
