Farm injuries
 Few city dwellers realize what a dangerous place a farm can be. They don't realize that a good farmer has to be a jack-of-all-trades. He has to be not only a good raiser of corn or wheat, but perhaps also good raiser of pigs, cattle, chickens, or turkeys. He has to be a good business man; also, somewhat of a carpenter, a painter, a mechanic, a plumber, and sometimes a machinist. Today, the farmer uses a number of powerful machines, such as combines, tractors, corn-shucking machines, corn-picking machines, and hay-baling machines. It is sad, but often in trying to save time, he tries to clear out a clogged machine while it is running, and as a result he receives terrible injuries to a hand or an arm. Many a farmer is killed by his tractor which perhaps "bucks" and rears up and falls over on him. In other cases he starts to fill the tractor with gasoline while it is running, and in a moment he is a mass of flames.

25 Per Cent of Deaths
 I read now that some 25 per cent of all the American workers killed on the job are killed on a farm. In 1937, the mortality rate from farming accidents was 58 deaths per 100,000 workers. This rate was surpassed only in the construction industry where there were 75 deaths, and in mining, where there were 112 deaths per 100,000 workers. In 1938, there were 2,417 accidental deaths on farms. Most of these people died in the few big central farming states. Most of the deaths were caused by farm machines, usually tractors. Machinery accounted for 40 per cent of all the deaths. Curiously, next to this came drowning, falls and burns. Very dangerous are the hay balers, the power mowers, and the corn pickers. Some of the fatal accidents were due to animals, especially bulls. One bad thing about the wounds which commonly result from farm accidents is that they are badly infected, often with manure, and hence there is great danger from lockjaw and gas gangrene.

Helped by Skill
 Some of the nastiest smash-ups of arms and hands that a surgeon sees are those produced by farm machinery. Often an arm will be broken in several places, and much of the skin and some of the tendons will be torn off the back of a hand. Many people lose their hands while working with corn-pickers. Fortunately, today, skilled surgeons often are able to save an arm or a hand which, in the older days, would have to be amputated.

With the modern electrification of many farms, a number of the people get badly burned or killed when they get mixed up with a live wire. Every magazine and newspaper read by farmers ought, at frequent intervals, to utter warnings which may save some farmer from death or a horrible accident. The worst possible thing that a farmer can do is to reach into a piece of machinery while it is running.

Ashland Float for Parade Sponsored

Ashland—Five men's service clubs in Ashland have united to raise funds to send a float representing the city to this summer's Rose Festival Grand Floral Parade in Portland.

Accompanying the float, which will cost $1,500, will be the Ashland High school band. Clubs participating in the drive are the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Jaycees and Elks.

The festival association gives 500 tickets to float and band sponsors to offset cost of the float. Each service club member has pledged to buy or sell one of the tickets, which are priced at $2.40 each.

Sale of all 500 tickets would mean a net profit of over $1,000 since float sponsors are required to return only the tax on tickets to the association. The High School Band Boosters club has assumed responsibility for remaining cost of the float.

Band Boosters are selling memberships at a minimum of $1 each as their share of the fund-raising campaign. Boosters can attend free all band concerts and are entitled to vote for each dollar donated toward selection of a float theme.

For 1959 as a whole, every group of retail stores had record sales. Service stations with $16.8 billion, were up 6.5 per cent from 1958, which was the previous high year. To sell the American motorist public their products, gasoline and oil companies invested an estimated $26.7 million in newspaper advertising last year.

Faculty Members Attend Meeting

Ashland—Three members of the Southern Oregon college social science division attended a meeting of the Oregon State Historical association at Mount Angel college last weekend.

These present from SOC were Dr. Arthur S. Taylor, chairman of the social science division, Dr. Clifford R. Miller, associate professor of social science, and Eugene B. Antley, instructor in social science.

Dr. Taylor served on a public school curriculum committee for history in all grades. The report of the committee was endorsed by the group and incorporated in the new course of study for the state department of education.

The first United States postage stamps were issued on March 3, 1847.
