Stop, Look, Admire! Rockefeller Jr. To Be Buried in New York Plot

by Alice Brooks

Fashion's newest excitement! Bright stripes give an Italian-inspired flavor to this sweater.

A shy, retiring man, he devoted his life to his family and sharing his father's Standard Oil wealth.

Philanthropies by the Rockefeller family began with his father, "JDR Sr.," but reached their full abundance when Rockefeller Jr. took over as head of the family after his father's death in 1937.

Give $3 Billion
By the time of Rockefeller Junior's death Wednesday, donations by the family to people in the U.S. and many parts of the world totaled at least $3 billion. His personal philanthropic donations during his lifetime amounted to more than $475 million.

Rockefeller from the time he was a young man exerted himself in giving away parts of the family fortune to worthwhile causes such as the Rockefeller Foundation. The foundation only several hours before his death announced quarterly grants of nearly $4,500,000.

A lifelong teetotaler and Baptist, Rockefeller encouraged the same thrift and industry in the organizations to which he donated money as he did in raising his own children.

Uganda Blows Up Famous Waterfall
London — Uganda is blowing up a famous waterfall. But it doesn't matter much — the waterfall is under the water anyhow.

Chunk by chunk, Uganda is dynamiting Ripon falls on Lake Victoria, once believed to be the source of the Nile river, according to information reaching here.

Five years ago Uganda built the Owen Falls dam, which raised the river to the level of the lake itself, putting Ripon falls under water. But the falls stayed there, an enormous rock barrier which cut the flow of water at low lake levels.

Driver Killed as Auto Hits Bridge
Albany, Ore. — Wallace Richard Bethell, 23, Albany, was killed Thursday when his car struck a wooden bridge railing on the old Corvallis road a mile west of here.

Police said the railing went through the car and the victim was thrown into the back seat.

There were no witnesses to the accident which occurred about 1:40 a.m.

Tucson, Ariz. — The body of John D. Rockefeller Jr., a philanthropist who gave nearly half a billion dollars away and still remained one of the world's richest men, will be buried in the family plot in New York state.

His son, Nelson, governor of New York, and Laurance, flew back to New York Thursday to complete funeral arrangements preceding burial at Sleepy Hollow Cemetery in Tarrytown.

Nelson said his stepmother, Mrs. Martha Baird Allen Rockefeller, took Rockefeller's death very hard. She was in deep mourning, he said. Martha and Rockefeller Jr. married in 1951, three years after the death of his first wife.

Health Had Failed
Rockefeller, known by many associates as "Mister Junior," died at the age of 86 Wednesday of pneumonia and heart strain in Tucson Medical Center. He had been in failing health for some time and entered the hospital Monday.

PATIENCE PAYS—Los Angeles Police Officer Sam A. Johnson walks little 16-month-old Brendy Jane Ramage down the station corridor as police waited for the tiny tot's parents to call reporting her missing. Seems little Brendy got up quite early, earlier than her mother, and went for a stroll. Patience paid off when the mother called to report her daughter missing, and all turned out well.—(UPI Telephoto)

The Family Council Norstad Suffers Heart Trouble

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a Judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. L. S. — Laura gave up her child.
Laura S. — I can't hold anyone who doesn't want me.

Mrs. L. S. — I am heartbroken at a terrible mistake made by my daughter Laura. Her 14-year-old marriage broke up because her husband was having an affair with another woman. I begged her to sit tight and do nothing about it for a while but she insisted upon a divorce. As if that wasn't bad enough, she gave up her 10-year-old daughter to the custody of the child's father and his new wife.

Nothing I or the lawyers could do would stop her. She said her daughter made the choice. But what can a 10-year-old know about such choices? Now Laura is on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

Laura S. — My daughter was unusually attached to her father and I felt she actually couldn't survive emotionally if she was separated from him.

When she first learned that we were breaking up the home, Sue said at once, "I want to go with Daddy." At first I told her she couldn't and it was just too bad. She screamed again and again that she hated me and wanted to be with her daddy. How could I hold her?

I guess I'm just not the selfish type. I don't want to hold anyone who doesn't want me. I couldn't look at my husband any more the minute I learned about the other woman.

The Council: Although Laura takes pride in her selfishness, she has shown a childish selfishness in handling her tragic situation.

We'll agree she suffered about the most wounding blow a woman can know, but she indulged herself much too far in a retreat into false pride and self-pity. Although she suffered, Laura's first thought should have been to fight for her home and family. The woman who gives up readily to "the other woman" is no heroine and deserves no special credit.

Laura compounded her error when she let her child make the terrible choice between two parents. She was in effect saying: "Your father doesn't love me and I suppose you don't either, so go with him." This is just like a child whining when he believes nobody loves him because he has been hurt.

A judge would not permit a child to make a choice of this sort if the mother was not in some way shown unfit to care for the child. Laura may have shown she was in such a sad state of hysteria that she couldn't and wouldn't care for the child properly. Her lawyer undoubtedly made a serious error in letting her present her case in this way. The custody judgment is most unusual.

Despite Laura's hysteria and immaturity we doubt whether the best decision has been made for the child. Laura must understand that her daughter was as wounded as she was by the events taking place in the family.

Although the little girl appears to have rejected her mother, she probably feels rejected by her and will continue to feel this more keenly as she gets older. The poor child probably imagined she would have her daddy all to herself and she will be deeply resentful of the strange woman with whom she is forced to share his love.

We think serious problems will arise in this child's development. Laura is in need of psychiatric help and when she begins to feel emotionally whole, she should consider legal means to regain custody of her daughter.

denied he suffered a heart attack.

Norstad, who was on a private visit to southern Germany at the time, was stricken as he played golf at Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

The announcement from Norstad's allied headquarters outside Paris said it was expected the supreme commander would be fit enough to return to duty in two weeks time.
