Doctrine Meaning Found by Chaplain In Mental Hospital

By LOUIS CASSELS, United Press International. The Rev. Ernest E. Bruder studied the doctrines of the Christian faith at a leading seminary.

But he had to go to a mental hospital to learn the real meaning of those doctrines and their relevance to the deepest needs of troubled human beings.

"The patients have taught me what the professors couldn't," said the Rev. Mr. Bruder, who is chief of Protestant chaplains at huge St. Elizabeths hospital in Washington, D.C.

"They have helped me to see the profound validity of what the Scriptures say about man's condition. And they have shown me what Jesus meant when he said: 'Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.'"

Chaplain Bruder has ministered to deeply disturbed people for 20 years. Like most outsiders, he went to the mental hospital expecting to find its patients bizarrely "different." But he quickly learned that they are "just like the rest of us—only more so."

Experience Acute Loneliness. "These men and women," he explained, "are simply experiencing, in acute and greatly magnified form, the loneliness and suffering and sorrow and despair which are the common lot of human existence."

Chaplain Bruder said he now realizes that "Jesus was not talking about some abstract concept" when He said the truth would make men free.

"The truth that makes men free is the knowledge that God is the father of us all—no matter where we are, who we are, what we are, or what we have been. It is the assurance that even though we reject Him to the uttermost, we can never alienate His love, His concern or His compassion. He will always be waiting, like the father of the prodigal son, with his arms outstretched, for us to come home and be reconciled to Him."

Chaplain Bruder has also learned that this liberating truth cannot be conveyed to a troubled person (in or out of a mental hospital) by words alone. No one can begin to comprehend the love and forgiveness of God until he has experienced in some degree the same qualities in a human relationship.

Gets New Insight. This has given him new insight into the doctrine of the Incarnation, and the nature of Christian fellowship.

The mission of this Christian fellowship becomes crystal clear in a mental hospital, Chaplain Bruder said. It is to serve as a "healing community"—a place where troubled men can encounter, in actual human relationships, the compassionate and restoring spirit of God.

"I have seen it work here," he said quietly. "I have seen it set men free from the most awful bondage. If it can get through here, where the barriers are so tragically high and wide, it can get through anywhere."

"That is what the patients have taught me."
