Corvallis—(UPI)—Lightning hit at least four homes in the Corvallis area about 5 p.m. Monday when a fast moving electrical storm crossed the city.

No one was reported injured. The electric charges knocked out two TV sets, raced around the living room of another residence and burned the wiring in a fourth house.

Probation of Two Men Revoked by Circuit Judges

Probation has been revoked for Truman Thurman, Klamath Falls, and Norman Jay Nutter, route 2, box 9A, Jacksonville, District Attorney Thomas J. Reeder said today. Circuit Judge Edward Kelly revoked the Klamath Falls man's probation and sentenced him to three years in the Oregon Correctional Institution Thursday. Judge Kelly placed him on probation for two years March 12 after Thurman pleaded guilty to issuing a false check.

Reeder charged that Thurman had violated the terms of his probation by failing to notify the probation officer of change of address and failed to obey all local, state and federal laws.

Probation Revoked—Circuit Judge James Main revoked the probation of Nutter and sentenced him to three years in the Oregon Correctional Institution. Former Circuit Judge H. K. Hanna had suspended sentence and placed Nutter on three years probation after he pleaded guilty March 3, 1958, to taking over $75 worth of tools.

Reeder charged Nutter had violated the terms of his probation by failing to find gainful employment, had purchased and operated a car against instructions of his probation officer, admitted to stealing a .22 caliber rifle and some household goods, had accepted stolen grain alcohol from a fellow employee knowing it was stolen, and had an illegal liquor distillery in his possession.

Newcomer to Medford Reviews First Impressions of Area

One of the first impressions that a newcomer to Medford has received is that it looks like "a bunch of damn nestors," who take no pride in their surroundings, live on the outskirts of the city.

The person receiving this impression is Johnnie Linn, a new announcer for radio station KODV who has been in this city for only five weeks. Linn outlined his impressions of Medford and the Rogue valley, both good and bad, at the request of Monday's Medford Chamber of Commerce's roundtable luncheon.

Linn said he has no other qualifications to speak on the good and bad points of Medford, except that he has been in all of the states in the continental U.S., with the exception of Washington and has stayed "more than overnight" in at least one community in each of these. He has lived in 20 of these states he said.

Before coming to Medford he was in southern California with the Air Force. Linn said he does not intend to stay in Medford but gave personal considerations as his primary reason for leaving.

Nestor Comment
Elaborating on his nestor comment, Linn said that along every highway leading into the city, he has seen more rundown barns and out-buildings than in any other section of the valley he has visited. And, he added that he has visited most.

He commented on this situation on his radio program recently, and one farmer called him to say that he didn't paint his barn because if he did, the tax assessor would come around and increase his property valuation.

If this be the case, he said, then it is something the people should look in.

Number of Signs
Another criticism which Linn has is the number of signs which "clutter" up the valley highways.

This is a nationwide problem, he pointed out, but said it stands out here even more than other places.

The signs which range from "chicken eggs to cafe" advertisements along the Medford-Grants Pass highway, are covering and cluttering up what is one of "the greatest natural attractions in the U.S."

Linn was quick to note that he is not opposed to outdoor advertising but says there is a way to do it and a way not to do it.

Noting that tourism is the valley's third greatest industry, Linn said, "there is no reason to cover what you have to sell with shacks and signs."

On the good side of the ledger, Linn said he is much impressed by the people here and their friendliness. He emphasized this by saying that he has never been in any other place in the U.S. where he has been more favorably impressed by the people.

Although he gets a little friendly, he said, he feels a feeling of "apartness." This is especially so among the service clubs. He said there are a lot of little groups doing fine work but he does not know if they are working towards a common end.

The natural assets in the valley, he said, are "without equal," but he showed concern about the smoke and smudge problem.

Learns About City
Before even coming to Medford, Linn made it a point to find out as much about the city as possible. He looked in the encyclopedia and, among other things, discovered that Medford has an annual rainfall of 20 inches.

But, when he asked persons in southern California who had been here, about Medford, they said, without exception, "It's the rainiest damn country we ever saw in our lives."

There will be no roundtable next Monday, but there will be one the following Monday, Dr. Ken Baker, roundtable chairman announced.

Linn said he has heard "two dozen" retail merchants in Medford say this of the economy, but by asking around himself, he has found that it isn't so.

There will be no roundtable next Monday, but there will be one the following Monday, Dr. Ken Baker, roundtable chairman announced.

Wall Street Chatter

New York—(UPI)—The worsening of the international situation will be reflected in increased defense spending, despite statements to the contrary, according to the International Statistical Bureau.

The Bureau expects a step-up in procurement orders for most types of defense items reversing the lower trend of orders to subcontractors during the past six months.

A slightly more conservative viewpoint is represented by B. K. Thurlow, of Winslow, Co. and Stetson, who believes the present stock market is not being motivated by investment considerations. When and if things calm down a bit, he says, his character may change. Meanwhile, the market should be accepted for what it is: a trader's paradise.
