Liberalization Of BLM Payments Being Considered

Washington – Liberalization of installment payments for bureau of land management timber, suggested last December by Congressman Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.), is under active consideration within the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the department of the interior.

Porter said the proposed changes would be of particular benefit to small timber operators. He pointed out that "the new plan would be advantageous to timber purchasers because it would free more of their working capital, while assuring the federal government of an adequate advance payment."

Proposals Forwarded

Porter said today he had been notified by BLM Director Edward Woozley that the proposals have been forwarded from Director Woozley to Secretary of the Interior Fred Seaton, following BLM approval. Porter believes publication by the department can be expected within the next few days in the Federal Register.

The proposed changes to liberalize the method of payment for BLM timber by private logging contractors would:

1. Establish a ceiling installment of $10,000, instead of the rigid 10 per cent of the total purchase price now required. Installments of 10 per cent would be computed for timber purchases amounting to less than $100,000.

2. Decrease initial payments. Where the purchaser must fell right-of-way timber for an access road to the main stand of timber, the initial payment would be 10 per cent up to a ceiling of $10,000 on the main body of the timber plus the value of the felled right-of-way timber. Under the existing requirements two installments of 10 per cent of the total value are required.

Single Form Contracts

3. Permit single form contracts for both O and C and public domain timber sales, instead of the presently confused situation of different forms for the two land classifications.

Congressman Porter met with Director Woozley and other BLM officials last December to discuss certain differences in timber selling methods in Oregon as followed by the bureau and by the forest service.

Porter said the department of the interior might act on the new regulations shortly after expiration of the usual 90-day period allowed for interested agencies and individuals to comment on the proposals.

Boltons to Attend Bay City Meeting

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Bolton, directors and owners of the Medford laboratories, 219 Medical Centra building, have been named delegates to the Convention of the American Association of Bioanalysts in San Francisco June 2 to 5.

The Boltons reside at 527 Spencer ave., and have owned the laboratory here for 18 years. Bolton is a member of the Elks and Kiwanis clubs.

The AAB is a national, professional organization which holds regional scientific workshops. It also provides a national magazine of the scientific laboratory field to it's members, and maintains an approved evaluation service by which it's members can check the accuracy of their work.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a Judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Dennis B. – Carol's pushing will break our son.

Carol B. – I'm determined to prove the boy is worth something.

• • •

Dennis B. – My wife and I are having a very serious dispute involving our oldest boy –14-year-old Gary.

The problem is that Gary is a slow student in school. His IQ is considered normal, but in the low average group. He can never be a world-shaker or anything like that, but his mother seems to think she'll yet make him President of the United States.

Carol sits with the boy by the hour, helping him with his homework. She is determined to keep him up with his class. She thinks she can even get him to go to college. He wants to be a chemist, like me, but there is absolutely no hope. We should try to find a suitable trade and get him into it as soon as possible. Carol's pushing will break the boy.

• • •

Carol B. – Dennis has always put Gary down. According to him, Gary isn't fit to be anything but a dishwasher all his life and it is ridiculous to expect anything of him.

It's not true that I'm trying to make Gary President, but I do think he can become a chemist if he wants to. From my observations of Dennis, I don't think you have to be a genius for that.

Gary's teachers tell me they are surprised at what he can do sometimes when he is interested. What is the harm of trying to help him accomplish something he really wants? He knows it's going to be tough, but he's willing to work. Dennis says he wants to save us both from an awful let-down, but I'm determined to prove to him his son is worth something.

• • •

The Council: Gary's desire to follow his father's profession is a healthy sign and shouldn't be discouraged at this stage. It indicates love and admiration for his father.

Dennis is foolish to display his lack of confidence in his son. Children get their concepts of themselves and what they ought to be from their parents. It is remarkable that Gary hasn't already lost his ambition and initiative, having been so long exposed to his father's negative attitude.

Certainly, we are not in favor of attempting to push children beyond their abilities, but the fact is that most children and adults use only a small part of their potential powers. The child who is willing to work to achieve something should get help and encouragement from the adults around him. Whether or not Gary can make college or become a chemist he is undoubtedly "worth" a great deal.

Dennis should be aware that emotional factors play a big role in IQ ratings. Many children who have been rated low at one time prove themselves to be high-achievers at other periods when their emotional conflicts are lessened. It is also important to know that the validity of the IQ rating is now being seriously questioned by educators.

On the other hand, the boy shouldn't be dependent upon his mother for help with his homework. An occasional lift over a hurdle, a bit of encouragement when the going is rough is legitimate, but the child who is accustomed to constant adult aid will never learn to go along on his own steam.

If Dennis would take a less negative attitude toward his son's future, we think Carol would be less inclined to overwork the encouragement.
